

Government Vaccine Clearance Committee Expected To Release Several Million More Polio Shots Shortly

Washington (U.P.)—The government's vaccine clearance committee meets today in a secret session that may lead to the quick release of several million more Salk polio shots for the nation's lagging vaccination program.

Eli Lilly Co. announced it was rushing new testing data on 3,000,000 shots to Washington in the hope the group could recommend their immediate approval. Information on another 500,000 Lilly doses was sent in earlier.

The committee, which is headed by Dr. James A. Shannon of the National Institutes of Health and includes Dr. Jones E. Salk, was set up by the Public Health Service to rule on the release of vaccine and to check on testing and manufacturing methods.

Not Enough Shots
Dr. Leonard A. Scheele, U.S. surgeon general, declared in a report on the vaccine problem Tuesday night that there will not be enough shots to protect all American children this summer.

But clearance of the new Lilly supplies of the vaccine committee and the health service would put the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis well on the way to completing its mass inoculation program for first and second graders. Release of more than 1,000,000 Lilly shots Monday already has permitted the foundation to finish its first round shipments to five Northern states and to start the nationwide second round of shots in eight Southern and Western states.

Scheele's report was part of the administration's urgent effort to restore confidence in the vaccine which was shaken by nearly two months of uncertainty, confusion and anxiety. The next step will be a massive report to the President Thursday.

Scheele said there is "always a possibility" that small amounts of live virus will turn up in Salk vaccine. But under the government's new safety standards, he said, the activity of the virus is reduced as much as science can reduce it "without destroying the effectiveness of the vaccine."

He assured parents they can have complete confidence in the vaccine's safety. But he added that in deciding whether to use it on their children they should follow the advice of their own physician or local health officer who knows the problems in their areas best.

Legion Seeking To Revive Flag Interest

New York (U.P.)—The American Legion came up today with its answer to the Davy Crockett craze—the American flag.

The Legion opened in a mid-town automobile salon, a 10-day exhibit of historic American flags and related documents. It's part of the Legion's 1953 "new glory for old glory" program designed to revive interest in and respect for the flag.

And it's aimed primarily at children. As one spokesman put it:

"We want to get back the times when on Flag Day (June 14) mothers would put little American flags in their children's hands to wave. About all they wave nowadays are Davy Crockett coonskin caps or Davy Crockett rifles."

The exhibit includes flags from all this country's wars, including the original flag raised by the six heroic Marines atop Mount Suribachi on Iwo Jima.
