Blushing Troubles
High School Girl

Blushing is embarrassing to anyone, but particularly to a teenage girl who is none too sure of herself to begin with.

(Q) "When I was 14 years old, I started to blush. I thought I would get over it, but I am now 16 and I still blush at every single little thing. Boys don't talk to me much because all they have to do is to look at me once and my face gets red. They are ashamed to have any place where there is light and a lot of people. It isn't because I don't participate in school affairs; I go to most of the parties and clubs. I have tried to forget myself and think of the other person. Sometimes that works and sometimes it doesn't. I have even tried different types of powder to cover up my blushing, but that doesn't help much. Can you help me?"

(A) You have allowed yourself to become so concerned about your blushing that you automatically blush every time you get into a situation where you are sure you will blush. That is why you must take temporary measures to build up enough confidence that you will not blush to keep yourself from doing so.

Powder alone will not cover up the rush of blood to your face and neck. You will need something which will act as a mask to cover your skin completely.

There are several excellent creams on the market designed specifically to cover blemishes. I suggest that you consult your doctor about the one that will be best for your skin. These creams come in different shades of skin color so you can match your own coloring perfectly.

After you have the cream on all areas of your skin where the blushing occurs, put a touch of rouge on your cheeks so they will look natural. Then, with this "mask," you will look like yourself, but when you blush no one will see a change in your skin coloring.

Once you feel confident that you are protected in this way, you will find yourself less nervous and hence, will blush less. It may take a year or so to break the blushing habit but you can do so if you follow this plan.

Daily Road Report Dropped for Season

Salem—(U.P.)—The State Highway Department said it has discontinued its daily report of road conditions for the season since all routes except a couple still closed by snow are in good shape with chains no longer necessary for motorists.

Preservation of Historic Materials Urged by Authority

Dr. Donald McDougall of Southern Oregon College this week urged the preservation of letters and materials of the present day as well as those of early pioneer days.

Speaking at the annual dinner meeting of the Southern Oregon Historical society at the Jacksonville Masonic hall Monday, Dr. McDougall said 100 years from now information about present day ways of living will be of priceless value as a part of the history of a people.

Miss Claire Hanley presided at the meeting. Officers named for the coming year were president, Miss Hanley, reelected; vice-president, Ralph Billings, secretary, Edith Gifford, and treasurer, Frank De Souza.

Miss Mary Hanley, new curator of the Jacksonville museum, was introduced, and the group adjourned to visit the Museum. Ladies of the Eastern Star prepared and served the dinner.

Breast Tumor Taken From Young Woman As Millions See Surgery on Television

Washington—(U.P.)—Shortly after 9:55 p.m. Tuesday millions of television watchers learned with relief that the ugly lump in the young woman's left breast was not cancer.

They scooped the young woman herself by a matter of hours and her anxious husband by perhaps 15 or 20 minutes.

The occasion was history's first televised surgical removal of a breast tumor. It also was the first time in history that, even while the surgeon worked, a pathologist in a distant laboratory examined the excised tissue and reported his findings by television and intercom to the operating room.

Surgeon to pathologist more than one-third of a mile away: "How does it look?"
Pathologist to surgeon: "Looks benign . . . mild . . . yes, it's benign"
Had the verdict been "malignant" the surgeon's work would just have begun. He would have had to remove the entire breast. As it was, his work was quickly over. And a few minutes later the waiting husband—who had not dared to turn on his TV set—was hearing what, under the circumstances, must have been a most beautiful sound, the lovely word "benign."

The show—and for all its realism it was a show—was staged at Walter Reed Army Hospital and the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology (AFIP) in Washington.

It was sponsored and produced by Smith, Kline & French Laboratories of Philadelphia, in cooperation with the American Medical Association, as the last in the spring series of S.K.&F.'s March of Medicine programs.

The stars were the 25-year-old wife of an Army doctor; Maj. Edward S. Bres Jr., of Silver Spring, Md., a Walter Reed surgeon; and Army Capt. Claude W. Delia of the AFIP whose new atom bomb-proof building occupies a hill site more than 2,000 feet from the hospital where Tuesday night's surgery took place.

Patient Unidentified
The patient lent herself to Tuesday night's performance in the interests of public education and under just one condition—that her identity be completely concealed. It was.

Although it was a show, it conformed rigidly to surgical procedure. Even the television cameras and cables had to be "scrubbed" before the operation. And the TV technicians, like the surgeon and his assistants, the anesthetist, the "scrub nurse" and the "circulating nurse," had to don the blue robes and cotton boots prescribed for Walter Reed Hospital rooms.

Doctors Formal
Just one concession was made to art—instead of calling each other Ed and Claude, as they normally would do, the surgeon and pathologist addressed each other on TV as "doctor" Bres and Delia. Otherwise, the TV professionals felt, it would sound too slapdash and informal.

The show started at 9:30 p.m. (EDT) with some talk and gadgetry demonstrations from the AMA's convention at Atlantic City. It was switched to Walter Reed at precisely 9:41 p.m. Sixteen minutes and 45 seconds later it was over except for concluding comments by the announcer.

You can buy this T-bone Steak only at Safeway

it's aged as only Safeway can do it

PROPER AGING is reason No. 1 why you'll find your best meat value at Safeway! For example: Each T-bone steak you buy at Safeway is aged so you taste its full natural tenderness and flavor. To assure you properly aged meat, Safeway built in this area a million dollar Central Meat Plant. Here Safeway meats are held in air-conditioned aging rooms, at controlled temperatures, the exact number of days required to develop peak goodness.

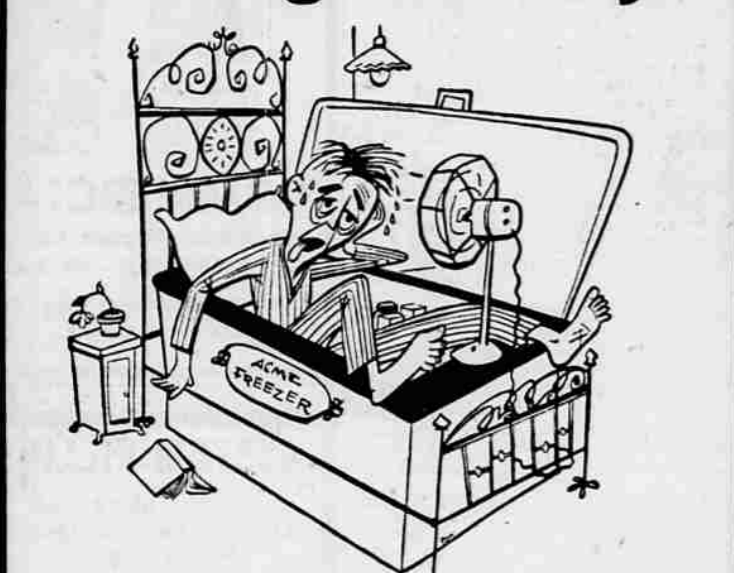

CLOSE-TRIMMED, TOO! Each T-bone steak you buy at Safeway is trimmed (trimmed before weighing, so you save money) to give you a maximum of center-portion steak meat. Sketch here shows you T-bone steak as Safeway sells it—with the "stew meat" tail removed (not just tucked under) and top-end gristle, bone and excess fat also removed. Safeway meat-trimming means better eating and better value!

...AND TOP GRADES ONLY! Each T-bone steak you buy at Safeway is from U.S. Government top grades of beef (actually, only meat of the top grades is improved by aging!). This tender, juicy meat is packed in sterilized boxes at our Central Meat Plant and delivered to Safeway stores by refrigerated trucks. At Safeway meat counters and at our self-service meat sections, you get the same quality!

each cut and kind of meat you buy. Our guarantee means that each meat purchase must please you completely or we return your money without fuss or quibble!
