OSC Students Stage Campus Water Fight

Corvallis —(U.P.)— The heat and final exams proved too much for about 200 Oregon State college students last night and they staged a spectacular water fight in the streets around the campus.

Police reported several fire hydrants going full blast and yelling students armed with pots and pans full of water dousing passers by—including members of the Corvallis police department who were trying to maintain order.

Monday night a water fight also broke out between the boys and girls dorm. For a while it threatened to develop into a "panty raid," but Dean of Men Dan Poling had the milling students quieted down by 2 a.m.

Although fires were set in barrels and firecrackers set off, police reported no serious damage either night.

Volunteer Workers Needed For Camp; Curtailment Faced

Word has come from Girl Scout headquarters that due to lack of response for week end volunteer workers, it may be necessary to cancel 100 registrations for Camp Low Echo this year, as volunteer labor is depended upon to build the new unit of four shelters which are an absolute necessity with the growth of the camp.

The office states that material, food, and ample supervision for workers, are available, but workers are lacking in sufficient numbers. The above unit must be completed before July 5.

The camp will be open on three week ends for those wishing to volunteer their services. Volunteers from any district in any numbers for the entire week end or even for a day will be welcome, it is stated, regardless of the previously printed schedule in which each district was assigned a different week end.

These week end dates are June 11 and 12; June 18 and 19 and June 25 and 26. Food will be provided for the workers, and those wishing to make it a family week end are asked to take food for family members. There are plenty of beds, mattresses and dishes for all, it is stated.

A statement from scout headquarters says "Camp Low Echo is one of the finest Girl Scout camps in the west. It has been made that way by generous volunteer efforts in the past. We do not want to disappoint any campers because of curtailed facilities, so please call the Scout office, Medford 2-5912, and volunteer for as much time as you feel you can give."

Girl Scout thanks go to the Boy Scouts for help from the Boy Scout crew of workers last week end to set up the waterfront dock.
