180,000 UNNECESSARY TONSILLECTOMIES

Medical or health authorities (of whom I am not one) estimated fifteen years ago that 1,235,000 tonsillectomies a year were "performed" in the United States.

Drs. Hansel and Chang estimated (Archives of Otolaryngology, Jan. '40) that 180,000 of the annual one and a quarter million tonsillectomies were unnecessary. They believed that, in the absence of hay fever and asthma, nasal allergy and allergic bronchitis frequently eluded diagnosis and that tonsillectomy was often recommended because allergic symptoms were mistaken for those of infectious origin.

Children with nasal allergy, allergic "sinus" trouble or allergic bronchial trouble are not benefited by tonsillectomy. Don't snarl at me, tonsil snatchers. I'm merely trying to teach people the truth as told to recognized medical authorities. I do hope neither Dr. Hansel nor Dr. Chang has changed his mind about it in the intervening years, as a Birmingham health authority did about rabies after he had concluded that "rabies is primarily a veterinary problem. Regardless of its prevalence among dogs, it will probably never cause sufficient morbidity or mortality among human beings in this region" (the rabies capital of North America) "to allow its classification as a public health problem of importance." The Birmingham man later had dog catching made the prerogative of the county health department. The U.S. Public Health Service likes it that way, and you know the federal boys have something to say about the allocation of federal funds to local health departments.

Back in the halcyon days of health columning medical colleagues who knew I wasn't using my newspaper publicity to attract patients, as some columnists do, used to tell me they envied me the privilege of speaking out... well, this may have pleased some readers but it has made few friends in the medical and dental professions.

About the allergic manifestations which are so often mistaken for "repeated colds," "sinus trouble," bronchial trouble and "infected tonsils," demonstration of eosinophils in the nasal secretion indicates that the trouble is allergic and not infectious, according to these authorities. Eosinophils are cells similar to or identical with white blood corpuscles, which take a red stain (eosin) in the microscope specimen.

Although I know precious little about allergy, a good many victims of the hypersensitivity found the remedies I recommend for prevention and relief highly satisfactory. For detailed instructions send stamped, self-addressed envelope and ask for the pamphlet Relief for Allergy.

Also available are the following pamphlets on allergic ailments: Hives, Hay Fever, Asthma, Eczema. Any one pamphlet is free if you provide stamped, self-addressed envelope. If you ask for more than one, inclose ten cents for each additional

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

No Data on Doctors

Kindly give me the names of doctors in this vicinity who practice the natural childbirth method... (Mrs. V. F. T.)

Answer—I'm sorry I have no data.

I know the sorrows drink can bring to the home, as my husband is for the no drink pledge, as I would like to give it to my sons too. (Mrs. ....)

Answer—I'd have some printed if there were a demand for them. I get little or no response (except unfavorable criticism) when I talk about temperance. I believe you can obtain blank forms for the total abstinence pledge from your local W. C. T. U. (Protected 1935 by John F. Dille Co.)
