

E. German Reds Reveal Plans for National Army

Berlin (U.P.)—The East German Communists announced today that they intend to create a national army, and indicated they will introduce conscription for thousands of East Zone youths.

The two moves were disclosed in a speech made by East Zone Deputy Premier and Communist Party boss Walter Ulbricht and printed in full in the official Communist Party newspaper Neus Deutschland.

Old Nazi Term
Speaking to the Communist Party Central Committee, Ulbricht made no mention of voluntary enlistment and for the first time used the expression "militardienstzeit" (military service time), the old Nazi term for compulsory service.

He said that Western imperialists were planning to "plunder the national wealth of the German Democratic Republic, the Peoples Republic of Poland, the Czechoslovakian Republic and the Soviet Union."

"The protection of peace demands, as laid down in the Warsaw agreements, the creation of armed forces in the German Democratic Republic in order to remove all hope of military success from the aggressive powers of the Western monopoly capitalists," he said.

Medford Auto Dealer Wins Sales Contest

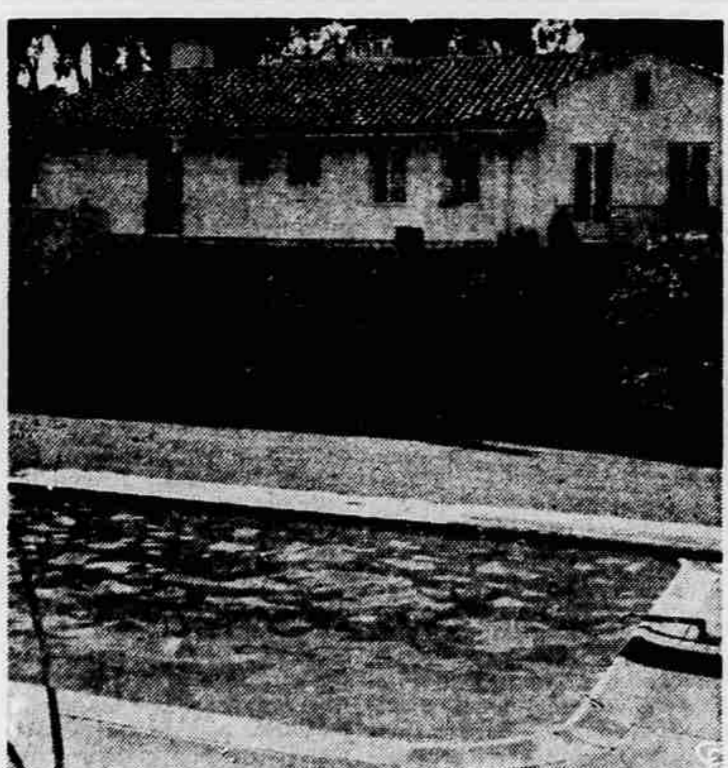

Wendell H. Sessions, owner of Medford Motors, Inc., was notified today that his agency has received top honors in a May sales contest conducted throughout the west coast. The Medford firm topped the list in the district and is one of 10 dealerships to win in the northwest. Sessions received the honors for selling the most Lincoln and Mercury automobiles for the district.

Mr. and Mrs. Sessions will receive an all-expense paid trip from June 24 through 27 to Harrison Hot Spring, Canada, as guests of the Ford Motor company.

Portlander Uncovers Cache of Ammunition
Portland (U.P.)—C. R. White, who was spading a back yard in search of a drain pipe yesterday, uncovered a big cache of government issue .30 caliber M1 carbine ammunition.

Police said it appeared the ammunition, which consisted of more than 2000 rounds, had been buried at least seven years. They said some servicemen may have cached the supply.

The ammunition apparently was in pasteboard boxes when buried but the paper had rotted.

Guardsmen To Open Camp on Saturday

Salem (U.P.)—National guardsmen from Oregon's and Washington's 41st Infantry Division will open their 8th annual summer encampment at Fort Lewis, Wash., tomorrow.

Some 8500 guardsmen will take part in the exercises, which end June 26. Train and truck convoys will proceed from home stations tomorrow en route to the division's tent-city at Fort Lewis.

For Maj. Gen. Harold G. Mason, commander, the 41st's encampment will be his last. He is expected to retire soon after

Central Point Girl Hurt in Auto Accident

Lou Ann Barnwell, Central Point, suffered cuts and bruises in a three-car automobile accident at about 9 p.m. Thursday, according to state police. She was not hospitalized.

The investigating officer said Miss Barnwell was a passenger in a car driven by Roger Dale Reynolds, Phoenix, which struck a car driven by Luvene Alice Sutherland, route 2, box 433AA, Medford, when it swerved into his lane of traffic. The two cars swung crosswise to traffic in the southbound lane of Highway 99, and hit a car driven by Lester Clifton Sproul, 326 North Bartlett st., Medford, which was stopped on Beall lane, waiting to enter the highway.

Both the Reynolds and Sutherland automobiles had to be towed away, officers said.

Byusen, Japan (U.P.)—Choichi Kato, 28, who advertised in a magazine for female companionship because he was "lonesome and without a single relative or friend," was arrested by police today for seducing 95 girls who answered the ad.

the maneuver is over. General Maison is superintendent of the Oregon State Police.

Successor to the general will be an officer from the state of Washington, to serve as division commander for four years.

Helsinki, with SAS— "Why does snow squeak in cold weather?" asks Scout J. P. R. via the Omaha World Herald.

"We've got a hot argument in our home," writes P. R. A. via the New York Sunday Mirror. "Only mammals are supposed to give milk. Right? Now what about pigeon's milk?"

"Our class keeps your articles in a big scrapbook. We notice that you've written the biggest snake. What's the smallest? enquires Class Secretary J. R. D., via the Bethlehem Globe.

Snow Squeak: The shrill fiffing of the snow beneath one's galoshes in real cold weather is caused by friction—the hard, sharp edges of frozen crystals rubbing against each other. In mild weather, when the thermometer is only a little below freezing, the edges are somewhat mushy, less hard, and more easily blunted. But as the temperature sinks, the crystals become increasingly harder, the friction increases, and the protesting squeaks become shriller and louder. And please tell your troop, J. P. R., that was a mighty fine question.

Pigeon's Milk: Adult pigeons, both hens and cocks, have the ability to digest food in their crops partially and then regurgitate it into the hungry, wide-open mouth of their nestlings. The same "milk" is a misnomer, however. It is not true milk, only looking like it with cheese-like solid particles which are formed by the breaking down of cells in the crop's lining.

In England, on April Fool's day, it is considered a huge joke to send unsuspecting children to the grocery store to buy Pigeon's milk.

Smallest Snakes: In considering smallest snakes, let's look at it in two ways—those that weigh the least and those that are shortest. As for the shortest, there are several mature worm snakes which are quite small—their adult size is five inches. As for the lightest in weight, there is a three foot long-headed snake which often weighs less than one ounce even less. Usually, a three footer would weigh about 32 times that much—say, around two pounds.

Many thanks for telling me your class keeps my pieces in a scrapbook.
