

Argentina Catholic Leaders Head for Rome; Impeachment Proceedings Due

State Biologists On Exploratory Cruise

Portland—(U.P.)—Two Oregon Fish Commission biologists will represent the state in an exploratory cruise of the eastern Pacific ocean to collect data on albacore and tuna.

Walter G. Jones and Edwin K. Holmberg will leave aboard the University of Washington oceanographic vessel "Brown Bear" which leaves Seattle shortly on a three-week cruise. Main objectives of the trip are to measure standard ocean conditions in the eastern Pacific, to determine whether albacore are presenting the area, and to study specific conditions which may be associated with tuna abundance.

HEAD of Catholic Church in Argentina is Santiago Luis Cardinal Copello, 75, who was ill at suburban home when Peron mobs attacked his Buenos Aires palace. (International)

Prominent Lay Leader Accused Of 'Using' Office

Buenos Aires—(U.P.)—Two of the highest dignitaries of the Roman Catholic Church in Argentina were arrested and expelled from the country today on charges of defying civil authorities and provoking last week end's violent disorders in the capital.

On their arrival at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, the two churchmen told newsmen "We were expelled to Rome."

The deportation was unique in that both men are natives of Argentina.

Buenos Aires—(U.P.)—Two top Roman Catholic leaders in Argentina, arrested last night on charges of defying civil authorities and provoking disorders, boarded a government owned airliner today en route to Rome.

The two churchmen, Msgrs. Manuel Tato, acting archbishop of Buenos Aires, and Ramon Carlos Novoa, left Buenos Aires aboard a regular passenger plane of state owned Aerolineas and were due to make a connection with a Rome-bound plane at 6 p.m. tomorrow in Lisbon.

The circumstances of their departure were not known.

At the same time, congressional circles believed that impeachment proceedings may start tomorrow against Supreme Court Justice Thomas Casares, prominent Catholic lay leader accused of using his office to hinder police action during the week end disorders.

A final decision was expected from today's regular Cabinet meeting which also was being attended by Angel Miel Asquia, president of the Peronista block of deputies.

Reliable sources, earlier today, disclosed the arrest of the two priests. The two were reported stripped of all municipal posts and there were indications they soon would be put on trial.

High Vatican sources said any order to arrest Roman Catholic prelates in Argentina would invoke automatic excommunication on President Juan D. Peron and all other persons involved.

The Vatican sources compared such arrests with the imprisonment of high church leaders in the Communist-dominated countries.

"We regard the reports of these arrests in Argentina as very grave," the sources said today.

Possible impeachment proceedings against Casares, a prominent Catholic lay leader, was indicated in a federal police report sent to Congress and the court by the government. The report accused Casares of attempting to use his position to hinder police action during the disorders Sunday night and of trying to get the army to send infantry troops to protect the archbishop's palace.

Casares was found in the palace Sunday when it was invaded by police who arrested 428 Catholics taking refuge there from angry Peronists. An official announcement said 159 of those arrested, including 64 minors, were released Tuesday night.

Twenty-two persons were wounded or otherwise injured in the clashes.

Tens of thousands of workers massed in the center of Buenos Aires Tuesday to shout their support for Peron in his campaign against the church. The rally was staged by the General Confederation of Labor which called a nine-hour general strike to bring out the workers. It was one of the biggest rallies in the 12 year history of Peronism.

Peron Addresses Throgs

Peron himself addressed the cheering throngs and appealed to his supporters not to be provoked but to remain calm and allow the church to be ousted as the state religion by legal procedures.

Shortly after Peron spoke, the rally broke up.

Argentina Acts Against Catholics

Buenos Aires—(U.P.)—In spite strong church opposition. 4. Abolished the obligatory teaching of religion in public schools and ended government subsidies to Catholic schools.

5. Ruled that five religious holidays recognized throughout Argentina as national holidays now are just work days.

6. Banned processions and open air religious meetings without special police permission.

7. Lifted the church's exemption from real estate and other taxes — a move that will cost the Catholic Church about $14,000,000 annually.

8. Introduced a move for a constituent assembly to be called to amend the present constitution separating the church and state. The Catholic Church has been the state church since the Argentines won their independence from Spain 145 years ago.

9. Arrested a number of priests on charges of being disrespectful to Peron.

Kidnaping Suspect Given Week's Delay

Portland — (U.P.) — Jesse W. Moore, 63, charged with attempted kidnap, was arraigned yesterday before presiding Circuit Judge Charles W. Redding. The judge granted him a week to obtain an attorney.

Moore has admitted the attempted kidnaping of one of the twin six-year-old sons of Mrs. Dillian Weinstein here on June 6.

He is expected to enter his plea after he obtains legal counsel.

Rising Kootenai Waters Watched

By UNITED PRESS

Idaho officials were ready to move state patrolmen and heavy equipment into Bonners Ferry today at the slightest indication of danger from the rising Kootenai river.

The Kootenai topped the 30-foot flood stage with a reading of 31.9 feet yesterday, but flood coordinator Dayton Douglas reported from Bonners Ferry he was confident the dikes would withstand the high water for a short period.

Reports from Libby, Mont., above Bonners Ferry, indicated that the river would crest at about 32 feet within 24 hours.

A tractor-mounted shovel was put on a standby basis at Coeur d'Alene and additional state patrolmen were ready to move into the area should they be needed.

Meanwhile, the Willamette river at Portland and the Columbia at Vancouver, Wash., rose only slightly. They both were at 19.1 feet, only four-tenths of a foot higher than yesterday. Many tributary streams were on their way down.

Seven local Air Force reservists will be among 700 Oregon and Washington reserves going on two weeks active duty with the 403rd Reserve Troop Carrier wing at Ardmore, Okla., August 7.

The reserves will be transported by air from Portland Air Force base, and will return by air after the encampment.

Those going from Medford are First Lt. Roy W. Bergmann, Lt. Col. Thomas A. Culbertson Jr., First Lt. Robert D. Thompson, Sgt. Donald M. Wiley, Sgt. Loran C. Fowler, Sgt. Frederick T. Baker, and Airman Richard Bell.

Accompanying the Medford group will be Capt. Richard N. Davis, former Medford resident now living in Crescent City; Capt. C. Walter, Capt. Clayton M. Hays, and Airman R. D. Butcher of Grants Pass, Sgt. Richard L. Grigsby, and Airman Arnold R. Dillon of Central Point, Airman Gilbert J. Thiel of Yreka, and Airman John T. Laxton of Glendale, Calif.

and Novoa followed by a few hours their dismissal from municipal posts by government decree. Tato, one of the leading figures in the months-long controversy between church and state, has been acting head of the church hierarchy in Argentina because of the illness of Santiago Luis Cardinal Copello.

The decree, signed by Peron and members of his cabinet, accused the prelates of promoting and organizing recent disorders in Buenos Aires and elsewhere in the country.

Tato was deprived of government recognition as auxiliary bishop, vicar general and canon; Novoa as canon and deacon. Both are members of the Roman Catholic Curia. A statement issued by the Curia said ministers of the archdiocese are designated by the archbishop which apparently meant the church will maintain them in their clerical positions.
