Las Vegas, Nev. — (U.P.) — One of the current hits of this gambling capital today is a symphony conductor who wears short pants and a Davey Crockett hat and reads comic books between shows.

The baton waver rivals Noel Coward, Sammy Davis Jr., and other top name entertainers in the busy hotels, but 11-year-old Paul Albergheiti appeared unimpressed by his success.

Paul, who doesn't look a day over seven, is the baby of the Albergheiti clan that has a family act, headed by sister Anna Maria, at the Royal Nevada hotel.

Fires Pistols
Papa conducts, Mama plays the piano and 15-year-old Carla has a voice that nearly matches her famous sister. Paul conducts the "William Tell Overture" and a symphonic version of "Davey Crockett" while wearing his coonskin cap. He also fires toy pistols in time to the music.

Between shows, I found the new star sitting on the floor by the newsstand in the lobby. He was reading comic books.

"My father taught me to conduct when I was five," he explained while thumbing through the latest adventures of Superman.

"We went all over Italy. I also have conducted in Denver and San Diego."

His mother walked over to say, "He's really so excited he doesn't know what he's doing. He didn't want to wear the short pants but he finally agreed to."

Paul took most of his music classes in bed as he was too busy playing baseball during the day.

R and B Fan
"My father would go over the music with me before I went to sleep at night," he said. "I also like 'Shake, Rattle and Roll' and 'Shh-boom'."

Papa Albergheiti's life-long ambition has been to see the entire family perform, to make up for the fact he gave up his own singing career because of bad health.

When Anna Maria brought out the family for their curtain call opening night she burst into tears.

But young Paul is not sure he wants to continue conducting symphonies.

"I'm learning to play the cello," he said. "Or I might be a doctor."

"Yep," he said, returning to his comic books, "that sounds real cool."

California's production of cement in 1954 was 31,600,000 barrels, valued at $94,000,000.
