Painting Original Presented Copco By GE Official

An original painting of the California Oregon Power company's Slide Creek dam, which was on the General Electric company's 1957 calendar, was presented to Copco here last week by C. C. Walker, G-E's western regional vice-president.

A. S. Cummins, president of Copco accepted the picture. After the painting was reproduced on the calendar, Walker said, the painting was chosen for the New York Art Directors show in New York City. The show group then reproduced the Slide Creek dam picture in its 32nd annual publication of advertising and editorial art.

Later the painting was chosen as a representation of art in industry, and it travelled throughout the capitals of Europe, including London, Paris, Brussels and Rome, for a year before being returned to Medford.

During the painting's showings, General Electric received a number of letters inquiring about the location of Slide Creek dam from people who, Walker said, "apparently had the idea of spending their vacations in this beautiful area. So we hope the painting has brought fame and some additional vacation business to your communities."

The executive also commended Copco for its accomplishment in selling three times more kilowatt hours than the national average in the southern Oregon and northern California counties it serves.

Mrs. Miller Says Crime on Public Stay in Hospital

Bethel, Vt. —(U.P.)— Mrs. Lucille Miller was back home here Saturday after a 16-day stay in a mental institution which she termed "a crime against the public."

Mrs. Miller, 45, returned here Friday from St. Elizabeth's hospital, Washington, D. C., after being declared sane. She was committed to undergo sanity tests after allegedly advising youths not to register for the draft.

Fought Off Marshals
She and her husband, Manuel, 44, held off federal marshals for 11 hours last May 3 when the authorities tried to take Mrs. Miller to the hospital. Tear gas bombs finally made the couple surrender.

Friday, Mrs. Miller charged she was kept in a violent ward at the Washington hospital.

"A ward of no return," she called it. She said officials at the hospital told her all prisoners were confined in violent wards but said, "I checked and found out that this was not correct."

"I very definitely intend to do something about it to see that the public learns of conditions now existing in mental institutions," she said. "It's a crime against the public."

Mrs. Miller faces a sanity hearing Monday before Federal Judge Ernest W. Gibson prior to a trial on the anti-draft counseling charge. Her husband is under indictment for resisting a federal officer.
