Good Adverse Neutral

Around Hollywood

By ALINE MOSBY
United Press Correspondent

Hollywood — (U.P.) — A frank movie version of a daring Broadway hit, "I Am a Camera" appeared headed toward bypassing American censors today.

So far the distributors of the controversial English film have not applied to Hollywood's Johnstone office for a seal of approval. But a spokesman for the movie-makers predicted they would copy another talked-about picture, "The Moon Is Blue," and hook the film into U.S. theaters minus a production code seal.

"The Moon Is Blue" was a fluff bit about a girl who kept saying "no." But the more frank and dramatic "I Am a Camera" tells of a girl who kept saying "yes."

Julie Harris portrays the girl from a respectable English family who runs away to lead a Bohemian life in Berlin before World War II. She is so eager to find love she even imagines she is going to have a child.

The dialogue among Miss Harris, Laurence Harvey, and Shelley Winters features her "affairs," mistaken pregnancy and a possible abortion.

But both producer James Woolf and actor Harvey, here from London on business, pointed out today the picture was made "on an adult level with taste and integrity."

"We wanted to stick to the original theme," Harvey explained. "Why does a film producer buy a play if he's not going to film the original story? He might as well buy a different work."

A spokesman for the distributors in New York said, "The screen comes of age with this adult picture."

"We are determined in fairness to the authors and the public, who have been insulted by watered down versions of literary properties, to show the picture as the original artists want it done," the spokesman said.

The play was written by famed writer-director John Van Druten, based on stories by another top author, Christopher Isherwood.

Although a sneak preview of the film here caused a wave of amazed talk around Hollywood, Harvey said the script was more daring before the English censors cut it. The English censor board gave the film an "X" for adults only rating. The picture also was passed by the New York censors.

"The English censor approved it provided the film was made with taste and that the sex could not be played up in a cheap and vulgar way," Harvey said. "Many things had to be cut out of the story."

Some members of the press who saw the film agreed it was "tasteful and artistic" and predicted an Oscar nomination for Julie Harris.

As We Live

By ELIZABETH HURLOCK, PH.D.

SON AND WIFE DROP IN FOR DINNER TO SAVE
Young people are sometimes thoughtless, but if they mean well it is foolish to take offense.

(Q) "We have a son who was married last summer. Since then he has invited us just once to his home. He comes once every two weeks for dinner, without being asked. He and his wife come in just before the dinner is to be served, so I have to prepare the food without any help. I think they are imposing on me because they are on a strict budget. Do you think I am wrong in expecting them to invite us to their home once in a while? I would like to know what to tell them without hurting their feelings. I would like to go out on Sundays myself. Before our son was married he lived away from home and we saw him only occasionally."

(A) Even if your son and daughter-in-law do come to see you primarily to save on their budget, you should be glad to have them and you should make them feel welcome. I think it would be perfectly all right to suggest that they let you know ahead of time when they are coming so you will have ample food ready.

If you suggest that you would enjoy coming to see them some evening, I am sure they will invite you. They have doubtless hesitated to ask you because they thought you would expect to be invited for a meal and this would be hard on their budget.

When you do go to see them, tell them ahead of time that you would like to bring a cake or cookies so that they will not feel that your coming would mean extra expense. And, since summer is a good time for picnics, why not suggest that you have a picnic together some Sunday, with you taking the food?

Young people who are inexperienced in housekeeping may not realize that dropping in for a meal with parents can be very inconvenient. They may not realize, either, that you would enjoy getting out of the house and visiting in their home.

They are, like most young couples, primarily interested in themselves and their own affairs. Therefore, if you want to keep up this new relationship that has developed since your son's marriage, you do not want to do anything to offend them.
