Clark Gable Takes Former Kay Spreckles As Bride in Nevada

Minden, Nev. — (U.P.) — A new "queen" reigned over Hollywood today—blonde actress Kay Williams. Miss Williams became the fifth wife of Clark Gable, the graying, he-man actor known as "the king," in a spur of the moment ceremony performed by a justice of the peace here Monday.

After the brief ceremony, the newlyweds left for a honeymoon at an undisclosed destination, possibly Gable's secluded cabin on the Nevada side of Lake Tahoe.

Long Friendship
The marriage climaxed 13 years of friendship between the 54-year-old Gable and Miss Williams, 37, whose battles in court and otherwise with her former husband, millionaire playboy Adolph Spreckles II, made Hollywood history.

Gable and Miss Williams always insisted they had no intentions of marrying. However, anonymous tipsters had telephoned news agencies in the last two weeks that they might be wed soon.

They got their marriage license only minutes before appearing before Justice of the Peace Walter Fischer. They were accompanied by Mrs. Elizabeth Williams Nesser of Los Angeles and Mr. and Mrs. Albert S. Menasco of St. Helena, Calif.

Mrs. Nesser was matron of honor and Menasco was the best man.

Gable has a cabin at Lake Tahoe, where he often spends week ends hunting and fishing in the early summer. He established residence there three years ago to obtain a divorce from his fourth wife, Lady Sylvia Ashley.

Gable and Miss Williams made headlines in 1951 when Spreckles testified in a pre-divorce trial hearing that she told him she had been intimate with Gable. Miss Williams denied the accusation.

Previous Marriages
Gable's previous wives were drama coach Josephine Dillon, Reah Langham, actress Carole Lombard, who was killed in a 1941 plane crash, and Lady Ashley, whom he married in 1949 and divorced in 1952, after reportedly settling $150,000 on her.

Miss Williams, originally from Erie, Pa., was married briefly in 1942 to Argentine sportsman Martin de Alzaga Unzué. In 1945 she married Spreckles and divorced him seven years later. During a series of stormy court battles, she accused him of beating her, chopping down her door and using abusive language.

In August, 1953, Spreckles beat her so severely with a shoe that she had to go to a hospital. He spent 30 days in jail for assault.

She won custody of their two children, Joan 4½, and Adolph III, 6, during the divorce.

Sheets Number One User of Cottons

Sheets were the number one user of cotton in 1954, the National Cotton Council reports. Following sheets at the top of the list of cotton consumers were shirts, drapery, upholstery, and slip cover fabrics; men's trousers; and towels, in the order named.

The top five accounted for approximately 2,400,000 bales of cotton or thirty per cent of end use consumption, the Council notes.

Sheets used 549,000 bales; shirts, 515,000; drapery, upholstery and slip cover fabrics, 507,000; men's trousers, 475,000; and towels, 323,000.

These figures are reported in "Cotton Counts its Customers," a study published by the Cotton Council's market research department.

Smullins Hosts At Patio Party

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Smullin were hosts Friday evening at a patio barbecue dinner party at their summer home, Hilltop ranch, on Coker Butte. About 24 friends attended.

Mr. Smullin is connected with KBES-TV here and KIEM-TV in Eureka, Calif. The family divides the year between Medford and the California city.

Bridge Table Cover Provides Assistance

New York — (U.P.) — A new bridge table cover provides mathematical assistance to the hesitant bridge player. The cover, made of washable white plastic, has the point count bidding of Goren and Culbertson reprinted across each of its four sides. Tailored to fit either the standard 30-inch or larger 34-inch bridge table, the cover comes packed in a matching tube for between-the-game storage. The price of the cover includes a copy of Robert Lee Johnson's new booklet on point count bidding. (BridgeEasy, 2330 W. Third St., Los Angeles.)

New York — About 2.5 million cubic yards of silt are removed from New York harbor each year.

A beautiful picture can be made by attractively framing a cotton drapery fabric that is printed with an interesting design. For instance, a Grandma Moses drapery print framed in pine makes a charming addition to a den. Florals and other cotton prints lend themselves to many decorating schemes.

An estimated four million Americans play the guitar.
