Theater Technicians Now Installing New Recorder

Ashland—The sound of rolling drums and militant horns echoing through the town in the late afternoon is becoming an everyday occurrence for Ashland residents.

The noise comes from the Shakespearean festival theater, where technicians are experimenting with the new high fidelity broadcast recorder.

The system, consisting of a tape recorder, microphone, amplifier, and four speakers, is the newest and proudest possession of the festival staff. Mert Cramer, last year's technical assistant, is spending the month in Ashland, working with technical director Frank Sullivan and his staff to set up the equipment and determine the scope of the recorder.

The experimental technical crew started last week recording with festival musicians in the high school music room and playing the records back over the speakers after the afternoon rehearsals. According to Mr. Cramer, last week's work was only experimental, determining the range of the equipment, seeing which instruments reproduce well, and showing the singers how their voices must be developed.

Most of the festival music this season will be recorded and reproduced during the shows, except for the battle scenes in "MacBeth" and "Henry VI, Part 3," and the trumpets in "Timon

As We Live

By ELIZABETH HURLOCK, PH.D.

Make An Asset of Height It Can Be An Advantage

As one's height cannot be changed, the only sensible thing a person can do is to make an asset of whatever height the individual has. That is what I told the girl who wrote:

"I have a problem and would like a little advice from you to help me solve it. I am 19 years old and very close to six feet tall. As you can see, my problem concerns my height. Everywhere I go, I hear people say the same thing—'Isn't she tall! Look at that tall girl!' etc. I had a job and quit it because of the remarks I was hearing about my height. Now I stay home and mind children. I don't go to dances or any social affairs because the other kids my age always talk about my height. All I do is stay around the house and wish for something I'll never get—that is, a little shorter. My height has made my life a very unhappy one."

(A) Your attitude toward your height is really what is making your life unhappy, not your height itself.

You can't change your height, but you can change your attitude. You are tall for a girl, no one would try to deny that. However, girls of today are, on the average, only a few inches shorter than you and many of them wear heels to add to their height.

You should do all you can to make your height seem less. That does not mean stooping, as many tall girls have a tendency to do. Instead, it means selecting clothes that will make you look shorter than you are. Never wear pencil-slim skirts, high heels or a hair-style that will add to your height. Wear flats, a hair style that will make people look down rather than up, and full skirts.

In the business world there is a real advantage to being tall, if you will develop poise and dignity to go with it. It should enable you to command the respect that doesn't often come to short girls.

There must be tall boys at the parties and dances who would prefer dancing with you to dancing with a short girl who makes them stoop. If you are attractively dressed, jolly, and self-confident, you have just as good a chance to be popular as a short girl.

Footlighters Plan Play in September

The Footlighters little theater organization is making plans to present its first play in its rebuilt building some time in September, it was reported today.

A reading committee will meet at 8 p.m. today at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thayer Tarvin, Cherry lane, to select a comedy for production. Rehearsals will start in the Footlighters building at the fairgrounds as soon as lights have been installed.

The building, formerly a two-story structure, has been cut down to one story and moved to a site due east of its former location. Work is not yet completed on the moving job, but the building will be usable for rehearsals soon.

The Footlighters have been able to plan no plays for production during the moving period.
