

West Warned Against Expecting Immediate Results At Geneva

West Germany's Foreign Minister Discloses Views

Editor's Note: The future of Germany will figure prominently in the discussions at the Geneva Big Four conference. Germany will not take part in the discussions, but the East and West German states will have observers on hand for consultations. Necessary. West German views on the Big Four and the future are expressed in the following exclusive United Press interview with Dr. Heinrich von Brentano, West Germany's new foreign minister.

Paris—(U.P.)—West Germany's new foreign minister warned the West today against expecting immediate results from the Big Four conference at Geneva. He said another meeting may be necessary.

"One should not expect miracles," said Dr. Heinrich von Brentano, who took over the Bonn Foreign office from Chancellor Konrad Adenauer last month.

"I do not expect the first days of the conference will result in an immediate relaxation of tension," Von Brentano said.

"But, I believe a following conference at a lower level could do a lot of good work towards preparing a second big power conference, perhaps in October," he added.

"Third Force" Concept
In an exclusive interview with United Press on the eve of Big Three foreign ministers' talks here, Von Brentano did the following:

1. Gave qualified approval of Western Europe's stern arms pool as a "very suitable vehicle" for achieving the "historical necessity" of unifying Europe. Last week British Prime Minister Sir Anthony Eden suggested the Western European Union as a possible foundation of a European security system ending the Iron Curtain.

2. Rejected both neutralism and the "third force" concept of a power-block between East and West in Germany's future.

3. Said he is "fully convinced" the Paris rearmament treaties can end traditional Franco-German hostility.

4. Predicted the Big Four talks can succeed in lessening international tension "if the Soviets so desire."

Calls Neutralism Dangerous
Neutralism, said the 51-year-old lawyer-turned-diplomat, would be a perennial invitation to Bolshevism to conquer our country.

"Should Germany one way or another fall under the influence of the Soviets," Von Brentano said, "the Germans would lose their freedom and the international balance of power would be decisively changed in favor of the East. Aside from that I consider neutralization unthinkable since it would prejudice the freedom of a future all-German government to make its own decisions."

In answer to a question about a so-called "third force," Von Brentano said he considered the suggestion "very unrealistic."

"These speculations are based mainly on the wrong presumption that a bloc could, in the near future, withstand the pressure of Soviet Russia, especially in the military field."

"They overlook the deadly danger that by such a course, the United States might be pushed into a path of isolationism."

WISHFUL THINKING
Knoxville, Tenn. — (U.P.) — Mayor George Dempster told police the reports of his death which caused police to be swamped with calls must have been "wishful thinking" on the part of some of his opponents.

Lakeview Rancher Locates Uranium

Lakeview—(U.P.)—A rich uranium find was reported yesterday by a Lakeview area rancher, who received confirmation of the strike from the U. S. Bureau of Mines at Albany.

Rancher and prospector John Roush said he and four others had staked 16 claims in a tree-covered, mountainous area nine miles northwest of here. The ore was rated at up to nearly 1.4 per cent uranium by the federal laboratory at Albany.

The strike was the second reported in eastern Oregon this week. Earlier, it had been reported that a strike grading 0.1 per cent had been found 50 miles north of the Nevada border in Oregon. This is the minimum content accepted by the Atomic Energy Commission.

Roush said his party consisted of his son, Wayland, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Tracy and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Leehman. The group has already stockpiled nearly 10 tons of ore, he said.

Clues Sifted in Hunt For Slayer of Actress

New York—(U.P.)—Police sifted a score of bloody clues today in their search for a killer who slashed and strangled a bit part actress in her Times Square hotel room.

The victim, 55-year-old Adlyn Woodington, was found late Thursday sprawled on an unmade bed with her head propped against a window sill.

A man's leather belt was drawn tightly around her throat and a pair of bloody scissors lay on the floor near the body.

Police said Miss Woodington had been stabbed in the forehead with the scissors. Her left cheekbone was fractured and several teeth had been knocked out. Her face was covered with blood.

An autopsy was scheduled for today to determine whether the actress had been sexually attacked.

Reporter Discharged For Lack of Answers

New York—(U.P.)—The New York Daily News said today it has discharged David A. Gordon, a reporter who refused Wednesday to answer questions of the Senate Internal Security subcommittee about past Communist activity.

Gordon denied at the subcommittee hearing in Washington that he is now a Communist or that he had been one for the past 12 years. He cited the Fifth Amendment in refusing to answer other questions about Communist activity.

The reporter was notified of his dismissal in a letter from Richard W. Clarke, executive editor of the News.

Is That So?

Who am I?

I am a solitary New World creature and I build neither den nor shelter. By using my forelimbs alternately I swim rivers a mile wide—in fact, I travel comparatively fast in water. My diet is wholly leaves and shoots. You'll do me a favor by not waking me before dark.

Although my kind seldom exceeds eight pounds today there was a time when my forebears were considerably larger than full-grown elephants, ranging from Patagonia to New Mexico, and not so long ago either.

In color I'm drab brown or gray with patches of white—and curiously, where other animals tend to be darker on the back, I'm darker on the belly. During the rainy season my shaggy coat takes on a greenish cast from minute plant life growing in my fluted hair which gives me splendid protection, making me practically invisible against tropical leaves where I spend most of my life.

I neither hear nor see well, depending mostly upon smell and touch. I am perhaps the only mammalian tree dweller who has a rudimentary tail.

My abnormal "normal" temperature fluctuates, when it is cool, it may drop to 85 otherwise it may climb to 91 degrees Fahrenheit. Expose me to the direct rays of a blazing sun for any length of time and I die. I may add, I spend up to 18 hours a day snoozing peacefully, rolled into a ball with my neck and head tucked between forelimbs and—get this—usually sleeping under a limb rather than on it.

Where almost all mammals have only seven neck bones—including whales and giraffes—one of my kind has nine! Another has six, and one eight. My claws are comparatively enormous. My hair has an upside-down set, the crown being on my underside and growing "downward" toward my back!

With the use of my slender prehensile tongue, I grasp leaves and shoots—my main diet. I'm perhaps the world's slowest mammal—my speed running about half a mile an hour.

Pile of Logs Moves; Eureka Man Killed

Eureka, Calif.—(U.P.)—Tilford L. Thompson, 33, Eureka, was killed in a logging accident on top of Kneeland mountain east of here yesterday.

Reports from the area said the vibration of a moving vehicle apparently started movement in a pile of logs on which Thompson was working as a log scaler, crushing him to death. He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Riley J. Thompson of Eureka and a sister, Mrs. Dorothy Sisel of Sacramento. Thompson was a native of The Dalles, Ore.
