

Ike, With Odds Against Him, Given Chance To Win at Geneva Conference

Violence Flares In Casablanca Streets

Casablanca, Morocco—(U.P.)—Thousands of European demonstrators charged through the streets of Casablanca today forcing all stores and cafes to close in the wake of 24 hours of violence that killed at least 10 and wounded 40.

Helmeted French troops in full battle dress stood at all the principal intersections to prevent new outbreaks of bloodshed.

The crowd waving French flags, started gathering around the Mers Sultan Square. Most were young people.

"Fermes Close up!" they screamed at store keepers who had failed to obey the closing order.

The rioting was touched off when a bomb exploded last night in a crowded cafe where Europeans were dancing in celebration of Bastille Day.

Changing Times Favor President; Popularity Risked

By LYLE C. WILSON
United Press Correspondent

Washington—(U.P.)—A gambling man would have to lay the odds against President Eisenhower as he takes off for Europe today on a whirl of personal, presidential diplomacy. The record of precedent is against him although the times have somewhat changed in his favor.

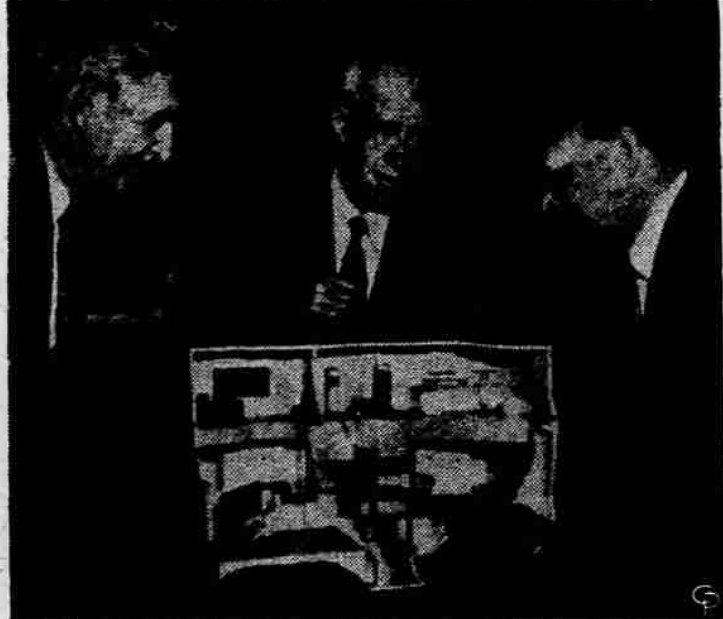

The record will show that Mr. Eisenhower is risking a lot of popularity on a long chance which he did not seek and which he would have preferred to avoid. It was pressure from Western European allies that won the President's agreement to a meeting at the summit.

Polls show that Mr. Eisenhower is the most popular politician in the United States as of take-off time today. The record will show that Woodrow Wilson was far and away the most popular man in the whole world on the day in December, 1918, that he sailed with Mrs. Wilson for the peace conference at Versailles. Some months and one more Atlantic voyage to Versailles thereafter, Mr. Wilson's popularity had begun to sag, never to recover.

Mr. Eisenhower will be the fourth U.S. president to undertake such a journey to Europe to deal with world politics. The others all came croppers, one way or another.

Franklin D. Roosevelt made personal, presidential diplomacy work for a time, and pay off. He delighted in it. Then came Yalta where the free nations began the bitter experience of losing the peace.

UCLA Gets First Book Printed in Guatemala

Los Angeles—(U.P.)—A copy of the first book ever printed in Guatemala, one of three known to be in existence and a rare example of early New World printing, was presented to the library on the Los Angeles campus of the University of California.

The gift was that of Maj. Robert B. Honeyman Jr., of San Juan Capistrano.

The book is a theological work by Father Payo de Rivera, Bishop of Guatemala, and is entitled "Explicatio Apologetica." It was printed by Joseph y

Ybarra in 1663 on handmade linen paper. The book, containing 575 pages, is bound in the original vellum. Roman and italic type faces were used together in the printing, probably for the first time in the New World.

The only other two known copies of the book are both in Spain, one at the University of Seville and the other at the Biblioteca del Sacro Monte at Granada. A fourth copy was lost when fire destroyed the Biblioteca Medina at Lima, Peru, in 1943.

ploded and Red armies squatted on Eastern and Central Europe like a million men-who-came-to-dinner. Mr. Truman was baffled and unprepared. He knew he had lost that bout with the Soviet's Josef V. Stalin and it irked him, although the time did come when he could say in public, "You know, I liked Old Joe."

It is nearly 40 years since Woodrow Wilson sailed for Paris and Versailles. The Versailles conference became a kind of initiation of the young United States into the shrewdly adult society of old world nations. The initiation was complete with painful hazing and humiliation. Wilson's powerfully phrased pledge to "make the world safe for democracy" came to nothing. His high-minded mission was a catastrophic bust, so shocking to United States public opinion that there followed many years of what was called isolation.

The late George Harvey, U.S. ambassador to the Court of St. James, could say and be applauded when he returned in the mid-twenties from his tour of London duty that the United States should let the troubled, near-bankrupt nations of the old world "stew in their own juices." A great many of Harvey's fellow citizens felt the same way.

Wilson broke all precedent when he went to Europe. And in the end, that wrong decision broke him, physically and mentally. Former President Hoover recalls in his memoirs:

"I was one of the few men around President Wilson in Washington who had replied adversely to his inquiry for an opinion on whether he should go to Europe and personally lead the American delegation. Col. E. M. House also advised against his going as did Secretary of State Edward Lansing and Bernard Baruch. We had all counseled that from the thunderous and free pulpit of the White House he could be far more effective."

The late Sen. James E. Watson (R-Ind.) in his book of recollections wrote: "Everybody believes President Wilson made the greatest blunder of his life when he went to Paris."

There is other such testimony and the record bears them out. But, Mr. Eisenhower, unlike Mr. Wilson, is a reluctant voyager. He had no stomach for this meeting at first. Moreover, he and the United States have learned a lot since 1918. The record of the mistakes of past presidents lies open before him. And, although Mr. Eisenhower is risking his great popularity on his ability to avoid great mistakes of his own in Geneva, he is not likely to repeat the mistakes of his predecessors. Those are the factors that give a U. S. president a chance this time to win.
