This week's sermon, "St. Patrick of Britain," is the first in a series of sermons on three men who, according to Dr. Blue, represent three traditions of the English church. A research historian, and the author of numerous books and articles, Dr. Blue took up the study of religious history as a hobby. Chicago Man Solves Problem of Paying For New Automobile By Use of Will Power

Chicago—(U.P.)—Richard Frisbie is one "average man" who seems to have solved the problem of paying for an automobile. If you're worried about financing your car, you can try his system. All it takes is a steady income and some will power.

Frisbie, a Chicago Daily News staff writer, figures it costs him $15 from his weekly paycheck. He has his present low-priced car and to accumulate enough for a new one when the time comes for a trade in. So, he merely sets aside that $15 from his weekly paycheck. Simple?

Frisbie drives a Plymouth. If you wanted to apply the plan to a Cadillac, obviously you'd have to raise the ante. Frisbie began his "car funding" plan in June, 1950, when he paid $579 down, including trade-in allowance, on a Plymouth. Thereafter he funded $20 per week. The $15 a week figure applies only if you already own a car, paid up. Frisbie didn't, but he does now.

All Expenses Paid By the end of 1950 he had funded $380. But he had spent $359.27, for a balance of $20.73. The expenditures included all gas, oil, grease, repairs, washing, licenses, loan payments, taxes and insurance.

In 1951 he funded $1124.96, but spent $1139.36. The net loss cut his balance to $6.33. He paid for the car in 1952 and continued funding. At the end of the year he had put in $1078.13 and had paid out $870.56 to increase his balance to $211.90.

In 1953 his expenses totaled $344.16 and his balance zoomed to $857.74. By July, 1954, his balance amounted to $1135.38. In August he traded the car in for a new one. This left him with a deficit of $62.95 at the end of the month, but he was back in the black a couple of months later.

Frisbie belongs to what is often called the "middle income bracket." He lives in a ranch house, neat not gaudy, in a new development in suburban Arlington Heights. He has a wife, four youngsters and a mortgage.

Cheated Once "The only time we ever cheated and took money from the car fund was when we bought the house, in November of 1953," he said. "And we put it back as soon as we could."

As a youngster, Frisbie appeared on a couple of "Quiz Kid" programs. Now he gets his mental exercise keeping an elaborate household budget with nine separate accounts. With a fine disregard for suburban mores and social customs, he rides a bicycle from his house to the railroad station.
