Cool Canadian Air Brings Relief To Sweltering East

Cool Canadian air spread over New York and New England today, bringing relief from a heat wave which has kept temperatures near 100 degrees.

The weatherman said the cool front was poised along a line extending across the upper Great Lakes and might also cool-off the muggy Midwest.

Rains in Southwest
Meanwhile, heavy rains hit the Southwest and freak accidents attributable to the weather claimed seven lives in Kentucky and Louisiana.

Creeks and rivers rose fast today in Western Texas, where almost five inches of rain fell in the past 48 hours. The dry Big Bend country of Southwest Texas took the brunt of the downpour, and the rains were expected to continue today and tomorrow.

Tornado Clouds Seen
Two tornado clouds were reported in Texas last night, at Beaumont and Lamesa, but apparently never touched the ground. Another tornado report was received from Pratt, Kan., but no change occurred there either.

At Owensboro, Ky., three teenaged caddies were killed when lightning struck a large tree under which they had sought shelter from a sudden thunderstorm.

Meanwhile, temperatures continued cool in the Northwest but sizzled as usual in the far Southwest. Readings were expected to reach 100 or so in Nevada and California desert areas.

In the Vernon district of Los Angeles, sea breezes dispelled thick smog which almost caused officials to declare an emergency yesterday.

Hamilton Street Work Started Yesterday

Grading operation began yesterday on Hamilton st. between 13th st. and 106 feet south of 11th st., according to Vernon Thorpe, city public works director.

Clearing operations on the street began about the middle of last week and are almost completed, Thorpe said. Work on the concrete curbs and gutters began this morning.

The J. C. Compton company of McMinnville, contractors, are in charge of construction.

Water System Work Incorrectly Listed

A water system is under construction in the Wilson park section, not the newly-annexed Laurelhurst addition, as was incorrectly stated yesterday in the Mail Tribune due to a reporter's error.

Plans are already formulated for a water system in Laurelhurst, according to Robert Lee, assistant city water superintendent. The system can be put in after the property owners initiate a petition and present it to the city council, but a 20-day referendum period following an election is necessary before this can be done, Lee said.

Construction on the water system on Loal st. in the Wilson park area will be completed in about two weeks, Lee added. M. C. Lininger and Sons, contractors, are doing the work.

Walter Norblad's Son Shoots Self in Foot

At Owensboro, Ky., three teenaged caddies were killed when lightning struck a large tree under which they had sought shelter from a sudden thunderstorm.

Meanwhile, temperatures continued cool in the Northwest but sizzled as usual in the far Southwest. Readings were expected to reach 100 or so in Nevada and California desert areas.
