Mission School Opens at College

The first school of missions and Christian service, sponsored by the Women's Society of Christian Service of the Methodist church, opened yesterday on the campus of Southern Oregon college with 56 registered from various cities in Oregon.

Study classes will be conducted each day throughout the week, and each evening will feature a talk by Dr. Gertrude Boyd Crane of Pacific university at 7:30 p.m. in Susanne Homes hall on the campus.

Following this at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Mrs. W. B. Landrum, field worker of the Woman's division of Christian Service with offices in New York, will speak to the group and visitors are invited to attend. Thursday evening, Miss Violet Crandall, missionary from Angola, Africa, will speak on conditions in that country. The sessions will close at noon on Friday.

Hornbrook Groups Meet Last Week

Committee chairman recently appointed are: Ways and means, Mrs. Fred Nelson; sewing, Mrs. V. V. Rasmussen; dining room, Mrs. Gerald Leslie; publicity, Mrs. William Jeffery.

Mrs. Rasmussen states that there is a need for clean used clothing with at least six months wear, baby clothing, and material suitable for bandages. A noon potluck luncheon will be served. The afternoon will be spent in serving and making children's picture books.

Marinate cooked macaroni in French salad dressing for 20 to 30 minutes before blending with other ingredients. Macaroni skillfully picks up the flavor; makes the salad taste extra good.

As We Live

By ELIZABETH HURLOCK, PH.D.

When Husband Is Unfair A Wife Needs Her Mother

Having an elderly parent live in a home where there are young children has its drawbacks, but it also has its compensations. That is what the woman who wrote the following letter has discovered. She says:

(Q) "I took my mother in to live with me because she is almost an invalid. I talked this over with my husband first and had his consent. I know it makes extra work for me but having her in the house makes it possible for me to go out and work while she looks after my two children. I

Dr. Hurlock work while she looks after my two children. I need to work to get the things the children need, such as clothes and shoes. Also, aside from her, I would have no one to talk to but the children, as my husband often doesn't come home until late and then he sits in a chair and says nothing. Every time we have an argument, my husband brings my mother in the argument or picks on one of the family. Do you think this is fair of him when he consented to have her live with us? Or do you think I should send her somewhere else to live and see if this makes the home better? I sometimes think my husband stays away from home because he doesn't like to have my

(A) As your mother is an invalid, you certainly should not do anything so cruel as to send her somewhere else to live unless you are sure she would be happier there than with you. If your husband agreed to have your mother come to live with you, he should be a good sport about it, even if he does find it complicating at times.

If he is staying away from home because of your mother, as you suspect, and if his grumpiness and silence at home is because he does not like to have her around, I think he is being very unfair to you and the children. After all, he could be agreeable and help to ease your burden instead of adding to it. Your mother certainly is contributing something to the home by taking charge of the children so you can work. And she contributes in the form of companionship to you, which your husband has failed to provide. It seems to me that she is an asset rather than a liability to your home and you should, therefore, insist that she stay and that your husband treat her properly.
