

Rotary President Tells of Recent Chicago Convention

Joe Naumes, new president of the Medford Rotary club, reported on the golden anniversary convention of Rotary International at Chicago, May 29 to June 2, as a feature of Tuesday's luncheon meeting at the Jackson hotel. Sixty-four countries throughout the world were represented; 4,696 clubs participated and the convention registration was 14,779, Naumes said. The convention headquarters were established in Chicago's Hotel Sherman, with its Rotary "house of friendship", but hotels throughout the city were utilized for the many convention meetings.

Highlights Told
Among the highlights of the golden anniversary convention was an address by Vice-President Richard Nixon who stressed need for moral as well as economic strength to halt the march of communism. He pointed out that the men in the Kremlin, who are responsible only to themselves, will be on trial before the whole world during the current Summit meeting at Geneva. This conference could be the world's last chance to settle differences peacefully, Nixon told Rotarians.

The Chicago Symphony orchestra and Purdue University glee club entertained at the convention. America's Town Meeting of the Air was broadcast, and numerous balls and parties were held. There are now 8,715 Rotary clubs in active operation with a membership of 411,000 members. New clubs since July 1, 1954, totaled 412.
