

American Indians To Be Topic of Coming Speaker

Present day problems of the American Indian will be discussed at a meeting sponsored by Medford Council of Church Women set for Monday, August 1, at the Church of the Nazarene. The public is invited to attend. Speaker will be Chieftain White Feather, a grandson of the famous Indian, Sitting Bull. Known formally as Dr. T. Ramar S. Bull, the speaker has devoted his life in recent years to lecturing on behalf of his fellow Indians and in evangelistic work for Christianity. He is a graduate of Friends university, Wichita, Kan., and also studied at Shelton college and Columbia university.

Chieftain White Feather is currently speaking at churches in Klamath Falls and vicinity. Mrs. J. C. Sparks, president of the sponsoring group, points out that the status of the American Indian is part of the study and action program of Oregon Council of Church Women. With the recent decision of the United States government to remove federal controls for part of the nation's Indians, it is believed many Indians will fall prey to unscrupulous persons and schemes unless a program of aid and education is established at once.

Cucumber Keeping

Cucumbers for slicing should be firm, fresh, bright, well-shaped, of good medium to dark green color. Cucumbers usually are held in storage for only short periods and cannot be expected to keep satisfactorily much over 10 to 14 days from picking time. Most favorable storage temperature range seems to be 45 to 50 degrees.

Yreka

Yreka — The J. M. Manley Construction Co., and J. P. Maginnis, realtor, have announced that construction is going ahead on the Highland Park subdivision at the west end of Yama st.

There will be approximately 40 to 50 veteran's and non-veteran's homes built in the subdivision this year, according to Manley.

There are four exterior designs being offered. The homes are available to veterans with no down payment and to non-veteran's under newly liberalized FHA terms.

The majority of the streets will be paved this summer. The subdivision also includes a two-acre park site. The Highland Park development is the first in Yreka where the streets followed the contour of the terrain rather than being of the grid-iron pattern.

The Yreka city council at an adjourned meeting recently unanimously approved a proposal for a new swimming pool bond vote.

City Councilman Jack Meamber said a water heating system has been included in plans for the new swimming pool to be built if Yreka's approve a special $70,000 bond issue next Tuesday.

Location of the new pool would be on the grounds of the old elementary school.
