Two Visit Medford Soldier In Europe; Riot Described

Mrs. Cliff Aldrich of Miss Pat's Dance studio, and Miss Karen Johnson, Yreka, Calif., now on tour of Europe, today are in Nurnberg, Germany with Dick Whitlock to celebrate his birthday anniversary which is today. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Whitlock, 1425 Crater Lake avenue, and is serving there with the Army as a dental technician. He is a brother of one of Miss Pat's dance students, Miss Sharon Whitlock, and he has just returned to Nurnberg after making a tour of the continent while on leave.

Mrs. Aldrich and Miss Johnson have visited most of the leading cities of the Scandinavian countries, Germany, Holland, France, Spain, Portugal, North Africa and Italy. They were in the news July 19 in the Mail Tribune when they were in Casa Blanca during a major riot. The two arrived in the city just as the riot was getting under way and were going for a stroll when they heard gunfire which they took to be the noise of firecrackers.

When the mob which had collected began to surge and people began to run for cover they realized they were in the midst of a riot and returned to the hotel where they had checked their luggage. They then boarded the first train to leave the city which turned out to be the last train to leave there for several days.

The two women had plane reservations from Tangiers to Madrid, Spain, so could leave ahead of hundreds of other persons trying to get out of the country. They pointed out in recent letters they could have sold their reservations for any price.

Mrs. Aldrich and Miss Johnson will return to Paris after leaving Nurnberg and then will fly to London, England, and also visit Ireland. They are scheduled to arrive in New York City later this month and Mrs. Aldrich expects to be home August 16.

Miss Johnson will remain in New York for a week before going home to Yreka. The travelers have attended top entertainment events in the various cities including the Madrid Ballet theater at which they were honored because they were the only Americans in the audience. Music was furnished by a 75-piece orchestra.

Also while in Madrid they attended a bull fight. A quotation from one of Mrs. Aldrich's letters reads, "We inquired yesterday about the bull fights and discovered one of the big ones would start in half an hour so we were off in another wild taxi dash. The taxis are very old cars and there are thousands of them. They go four abreast, or eight if they can crowd in, and from that point on its a crashing duel of fenders with no one stopping for anything until the destination. After the fourth fender crash I knew we didn't have to worry about getting hurt. They blow each horn approximately 12 blasts per block so Madrid is rather noisy. (In Holland the steeple bells put us to sleep and in Spain its the auto horns.) They swear aloud with each move and everybody eventually gets there."

"In watching the movies I've always felt sorry for the bulls and knew I'd never be able to endure the gory sight. But these Spanish people take this national sport more seriously than anything I've ever known, including American football and baseball. I've never seen such melodrama—or how can I describe it? The grand parade and bravery and close calls with bulls, its magnificent color, action... One bull came out and everyone took to cover including the bravest matador. The crowd began to get as ugly as the bull and we didn't know what to expect. But it was only that the crowd wanted the bull to live as he was braver than the matadors."

"The Spain we saw is extremely different from the tourists' Spain. That has been true of all the countries we have been in. We've seen all the tourist attractions, then we went behind the pretty picture the travel books tell you about and we've learned so much more that way about how the people really live, and what they believe. I'm coming home to appreciate what we really and truly have; we have a lot to be thankful for."

"We've seen women washing clothes in ditches by the roadside, working in the fields and tending goats, definitely lacking enough to eat. Our clothes are fingered by a hundred women a day and we are still mystified by 'where are the other Americans that are over here?'"

In Lisbon, Portugal, however, she lists the items on their luncheon menu which included, "crawfish, all sorts of spiced fishes and anchovies, tomatoes, cucumbers, salad, olives, salami, the first course. Next came fried fish; the third course home made noodles with lamb, fresh lemonade and fruit for dessert a whole basketful of figs, bananas, oranges, pears, peaches, plums and grapes."

"While in Paris window shopping, walking among beautifully dressed women with furs, jewels and Christian Dior suits, we suddenly heard screams and war whoops and saw the entire street full of naked American Indians, which turned out to be a Paris Artists celebration, the same idea as the Grants Pass Cave Men. They attacked every woman on the street regardless of jewels or furs and kissed and hugged them all. Yes, Karen and I got it too, you couldn't get away. Some women ran into the stores and the Indians ran after them. Karen and I had just had our dresses cleaned at $2.50 each and had just put them on that morning. We were greased paint all over. They ruined hundreds of women's clothes all over Paris."

While in Paris in addition to seeing the various tourist attractions including the Eiffel tower, and the Moulin Rouge, they attended a performance of the Folies Bergiere. There they also met Jeanne Maire, French Ballerina who appeared in one of Danny Kaye's recent pictures.

Throughout the various countries the two visited dance studios and also studied dancing, making particular study of the native dances.

The two women remarked that they found our tourist public relations with Europeans could be improved, and that Europeans react to the seeming arrogance of many of the Americans touring the countries. However, the women said they found the people responsive to friendliness and fair treatment.

Ashland—Mrs. Harriet Ambrose was 100 years old Sunday, July 31, and she observed the day with visits from relatives and a reception given in her honor at Ashland Methodist church. She received many birthday greetings, including one from President Dwight Eisenhower.

In Ashland for the event were Mrs. Ambrose's daughter, Mrs. M. E. Padgett, Portland, and Mr. Padgett, her son Keith Ambrose and his wife from San Diego, as well as a number of nieces and nephews.

About 75 guests attended the reception held in the church parlors. The Rev. Ross Knott extended congratulations to the honored guest, and women of the congregation provided refreshments for the party.

In lieu of personal gifts to Mrs. Ambrose, her friends have contributed to a fund which will be used to make a purchase for the new Methodist parsonage in her honor.
