ROK Leaders May Be Eyeing Lost Country

Seoul, Korea — (U.P.) — The Republic of Korea's top government and military leaders met in secret for two hours today at the defense ministry and it was believed they mapped plans for regaining Communist-held territory south of the 38th parallel. The meeting followed a government announcement Monday of ROK intentions to recover the territory below the parallel which went to North Korea after the armistice. The ROKs have said they would use their armed forces to recover the territory if necessary. Dr. Hong Kee Karl, official government spokesman who attended today's meeting, refused to say what had been discussed. It was Karl who told the United Press the ROKs will employ all means, including military force, to regain the lost territory.

GET THE STRAP

Waterbury, Conn. — (U.P.) — Superintendent of Schools Dr. John G. Gilmartin noted that Connecticut statutes provide a method of dealing with juvenile delinquency in schools. Gilmartin said a law has been on the books for many years permitting "corporal punishment." He said "when discipline must be enforced and extreme measures are necessary, there is always the strap."

Providence, R.I. — (U.P.) — Ralph J. Gaul, charged with breaking into two gas stations, told police he was trying to finance a birthday party.

Shoemaker Increases Television Quiz Show Winnings To $32,000

New York — (U.P.) — Gino Prato, winner of $32,000 on a television quiz show, secluded himself in his Bronx shoe shop today to begin a week-long ordeal of deciding whether to risk doubling his fortune or losing it in a last-chance gamble.

The 55-year-old cobbler hampered his way through a four-part quiz in his category, opera, in his fourth appearance Tuesday night on CBS-TV's "$64,000 Question."

Next Tuesday night the Italian-born Prato will make his climactic appearance before the TV cameras and announce his decision.

Appears Tense

If he decides to continue and answer the questions, he will take home $64,000. If he loses, he will win a Cadillac worth at least $7,000 as a consolation prize. If he feels he should not go on, he will be permitted to keep his $32,000.

Questioned after the show, the little shoemaker appeared tense. "Fine, fine, I feel fine," he said. "And if you please I would like to go home now."

Before leaving he made a good-natured plea for privacy. "You people," he said, "please leave me alone this week or I go batty. And if I go batty, I can't answer the question next week."

Win, lose or quit next week, Prato has a surprise in store for him. It was learned that officials of the Metropolitan Opera in New York would present Prato next Tuesday with a pair of season passes, eighth row center in the Met's orchestra.

Applause From Audience

Prato, who spent part of Tuesday praying in St. Patrick's Cathedral, drew warm applause from the studio audience Tuesday night when he announced his intention of going for $32,000.

"The Lord has helped me all through my life," he said, "and I think He will help me now. I think I will go on."

He took the full 30 seconds to answer his long question: "The name of the opera which launched a pinch-hitting Arturo Toscanini on his career ('Aida'), the place in which Toscanini conducted the opera (Brazil), the place in which the opera was premiered originally (Cairo, Egypt) and the name of the holiday on the eve of which it was premiered (Christmas.)"

Dean Martin Wants To Patch Up Feud

Hollywood — (U.P.) — Dean Martin said today he wants to end a two-month-old feud with his comedy partner, Jerry Lewis, to preserve a $20,000,000 bundle of contracts.

The curly-haired singer said something has to happen soon because he and Lewis are scheduled to start a new picture next month. A new television series starring them also is scheduled this fall.

The two comedy stars haven't spoken for two months. "To me, this isn't a love affair," said Martin, extending a peace feeler. "This is big business. I think it's ridiculous for the boy to brush aside such beautiful contracts."

But "no comment" was all Lewis had to say. "I don't want to break up the team," Martin said. "It's a damn fine living and I want to hold onto it."

He said he feels they could work together, regardless of personal matters. "I know a lot of people who work together and go their separate ways afterward," he added.

Portland — (U.P.) — Portland's 54-year-old Vaughn street ball park may become industrial and commercial property next season when the Portland baseball club moves into Multnomah stadium, it has been reported.

NO YOU DON'T — Arriving in San Francisco for his TV premiere of The Great Gildersleeve (Aug. 11), "Gildy" (Willard Waterman) tries to exercise his right as "water commissioner" for a cooling drink. Lucky Gildy lost the heated battle with Sgt. Dave November and settled for a cold beer in a nearby tavern.

ON TRIAL — Sgt. James C. Gallagher, 23, of Brooklyn, leaves guard house on Governors Island in New York to face general courtmartial. He is charged with collaborating with the Communists and "unpremeditated murder" while a POW in Korea. He is accused of killing "fellow American prisoners of war."

Vineyard Haven, Mass. — (U.P.) — This village's bowling alley is operated, appropriately enough, by Albion Alley.
