Down Payments on New Cars Unchanged

Detroit (U.P.)—Despite all the talk about "crazy credit" in the booming automobile market, Americans buying cars on credit as a whole are making just as big down payments as they have done in the past 10 years, a study of new car financing indicated today.

The survey was made by Universal C.I.T. Credit Corp. New York, whose business is financing automobiles. It claims to be the largest independent automobile finance agency.

It reported it found that in the 10 years since the end of World War II, the American public has bought $107,000,000,000 worth of new cars on time. Of this amount, 22 per cent was handled through down payments and the other 78 per cent financed.
