Blacksmith Turns Violin Maker After Retirement — Cadiz, O. — (U.P.) — Hobbyists of retirement age have a champion in John Rumchick, 70, a blacksmith turned violin-maker. Rumchick spent most of his life as a coal mine blacksmith, but with retirement came a new hobby and business. He returned to a boyhood love for violins and started making them by hand.

Rumchick recalls an early acquaintance with the famed Fritz Kreisler. Both were boys in the same Austrian town. Kreisler went on to great heights as a musician, but Rumchick had to forget his musical ambitions because of economic difficulties. "I'm too old for a music career," he told friends. "But, I will be able to follow music as a hobby and keep busy."
