Around Hollywood

By ALINE MOSBY United Press Correspondent

Editor's note: Aline Mosby is on vacation. Today's guest columnist is Broderick Crawford, the movie tough guy who says he's been "discovered" more than any actor in the business.

By BRODERICK CRAWFORD Written for The United Press Hollywood — (U.P.) — I'm not entirely certain, but, next to being undiscovered, one of the great banes of an actor's life is being "discovered." Neither knocking or boasting, I've probably been as "discovered" as anyone.

I'm getting tired of it. Let's look at it realistically. Charles Bickford, who is wonderful in "Not As a Stranger," in which I also appear, has always been a fine actor. Yet, when he did "Johnny Belinda," every critic in the country discovered him.

Humphrey Bogart, who made more money in movies than Edison ever dreamed possible, did pretty well from "Petrified Forest" through "Sierra Madre," being discovered from picture to picture. Then he did "African Queen" and, if this is possible, he was "super-discovered."

Plenty Young That's the way it goes with actors. We go along from picture to picture, some good, some bad. Most of us try pretty hard all the time. I started on the stage when I was eight months old. My mother, Helen Broderick, and my father, Lester Crawford, both stars of Broadway, carried me on stage in a play, the name of which I have forgotten. Don't think some un-hailed Broadway columnist didn't raise the rufers with a cry of "bright new young star."

He was fooling, but that kept me off the stage for 20 years. Sam Goldwyn, a well known Hollywood figure, saw me in an early show on Broadway, "Punches and Judy," and offered me a contract. He discovered me. I came to Hollywood, did a picture called "Woman Chases Man," and was back on Broadway before the cameraman could stop cranking. Nobody discovered me in that.

Big and Stupid But on the way back to New York, I did a little "discovering" on my own. I read a book called "Of Mice and Men." I wanted to do the stage version. I was the biggest, stupidest, dullest, most slow-witted Lennie in history. The play ran a year I was a smash. Then they made the movie and Lon Chaney Jr. was the biggest, best, stupidest Lennie ever seen.

In "Not As a Stranger" Lon, playing Robert Mitchum's father, will be discovered by audiences and critics. Need I point out that he had been discovered playing the film version of Lennie. And he was good in that, too.

Actor's aren't like uranium deposits. They don't lie fallow until some joker with a buzz box discovers them. They're working all the time.

Crosby's Injury Not Break, Doctors Say Tacoma, Wash. — (U.P.) — Madigan Army hospital doctors said Saturday Philip Crosby, 21-year-old son of crooner Bing Crosby, did not suffer a broken back after all in an automobile accident last Sunday, only muscle injuries.

At first it was believed young Crosby suffered one or more fractured vertebrae when his car left a road near Raymond, Wash. However, doctors at the army hospital on the Fort Lewis reservation said X-rays showed no broken bones.

Crosby, now an army private at Fort Lewis, was reported to be in "good" condition. Attendants said he was expected to be released from the hospital in about a week.

SERVICE PLANNED Seattle — (U.P.) — Limited passenger service by ship between southeastern Alaska and Puget Sound on American Flag vessels will be available by 1957, a spokesman for the Alaska Merchant Line said today. The line opened its offices in Seattle Friday.

Installation Payment Plan Available in Many Schools for College Educations

By UNITED PRESS

If you're sending a youngster to college this fall you may be able to pay the tuition on the installment plan. Many schools permit installment payments, a survey showed, and some have their own privately endowed loan funds for deserving students.

About 300 schools belong to Tuition Plan, Inc., oldest and biggest institution in college installment financing. The trend toward time-payment tuition was reflected in a recent announcement by Queens College and the Union National Bank at Charlotte, N.C.

Two Different Contracts Under a plan adopted jointly by the two institutions, a student's education may be financed at the rate of $50 or $60 a month under two different contracts.

Under one plan, the parents begin depositing $50 a month in the bank 24 months before the student's registration. The deposits continue for two years and eight months after graduation. The bank will pay $1200 to the college each year the student is enrolled.

Under the second plan monthly deposits of $65 begin one year before registration and continue one year and three months after graduation.

Carl C. McGraw, president of the bank, said most middle-income families would not be able to own homes or automobiles without installment credit, and that time payments for college tuition is a logical extension of the installment system.

Tuition Plan, Inc., with headquarters in New York, was acquired last June by C.I.T. Financial Corp. Arthur O. Dietz, C.I.T. president, said the acquisition guarantees Tuition Plan increased financial support whenever more resources are needed.

Full Cost Paid Under the plan, the company pays the full amount, including the tuition, board, books and other fees, at the start of each term. Parents who contract to use the plan pay 4 per cent interest, usually in eight monthly installments for the academic year.

A company spokesman said from 10 to 20 per cent of the students in schools subscribing to the program take advantage of the time payment plan. Of those who use it, far less than one per cent default, the company said.

One of the biggest subscribing institutions is Seton Hall College at South Orange, N.J. A spokesman for First National City Bank of New York said the bank makes "as many as 50 to 100 loans a day" to students or parents for the purpose of financing college education.

82-Year-old Man Dies in Portland Accident

Portland — (U.P.) — Moses Black, 82-year-old Portlander, was killed instantly Friday night when he was struck by a car on southwest Harbor drive.

Driver of the car, William B. Russell of Portland, told police he didn't see Black until he had struck him. The impact buckled the hood on his sports car back against the windshield.

Portland — (U.P.) — Most Oregon lawyers would like to be covered by the federal social security act. That was the conclusion Friday of the Oregon State bar which mailed out a poll on social security last month.

Replies indicated that 1047 lawyers would like to have social security extended to cover them while only 300 were opposed to it.

Results will be sent to the American Bar association and Oregon congressmen.

Two Cars Wrecked by Blasts in Washington

Burlington, Wash. — (U.P.) — Mysterious explosions wrecked two automobiles parked in front of the home of a state patrolman near here early Saturday and officials believed the blasts were the work of someone who opposes the operation of a truck weighing station in this area.

Station Dynamited Capt. Roy Carlson, executive officer of the patrol, linked the blasts with the operation of the truck scales east of Sedro Woolley. The weighing station was dynamited July 30 after the patrol was warned it never would be permitted to operate the scales. Since then the station has been manned 24 hours a day.

Harrison, however, does not work at the station. The cars were parked side by side on the driveway leading into the garage of Harrison's ranch-style home. Investigators said the cars were a total loss.

Mental Exam Ordered For 'French Officer' Portland — (U.P.) — U. S. District Judge Claude McCulloch Friday ordered a psychiatric examination for 21-year-old Neville James Treakle who was caught posing as a French Foreign Legion captain here.

The young Tacoma, Wash., man will be examined to determine whether he is competent to understand the charges against him. He was accused of making false statements to the government and riding in government aircraft by pretending to be a French captain assigned to NATO.
