

Man Offers Home To Dr. Sam Lee; Hits Restrictions

Honolulu, T. H. — (U.P.) — A former resident of Long Beach, Calif., who is "damned sick and tired" of residential restrictions, said Saturday he would sell Dr. Sammy Lee "a fine home" within 12 miles of Garden Grove.

James F. Collins, a sewing machine company executive, said he owned a four bedroom home in an "exclusive neighborhood" of Long Beach's Los Cerritos district which he would "be proud" to sell to Lee.

Racial Restrictions

Lee, famed Olympic swimming champion, was turned down in his attempts to buy a home in Garden Grove because of a "racial restriction" covering the sale of Lee is of Korean ancestry.

Collins said his house was valued at $20,000 and was in "an old neighborhood conveniently near where Dr. Lee wants to live."

"I'll spend up to a thousand dollars in addition to force the issue," the executive said. "I'm damned sick and tired of seeing such bigotry practiced."

Ashamed of "Goings On"

He said he moved to Honolulu five years ago "and I'm staying here just because I'm so ashamed of such goings on on the mainland."

Collins said his property is in a restricted area "but it's not in a tract and its sale should be upheld by the courts." He said the district was populated with professional people. "There are four doctors right in the neighborhood."

"I think it's a shame that trails and real estate people still go for that malarkey," Collins said. It's time somebody called them on it."

Oregon Electric Line Short of Cars

Salem — (U.P.) — The Oregon Electric Line has felt the freight car shortage in western Oregon. Public Utilities Commissioner Charles H. Heltzel said Saturday.

He said the shortage on this route was unusual. Up to now, the shortage has been confined to the Southern Pacific system in western Oregon.

But the Southern Pacific was able to supply 94 per cent of the cars ordered by western Oregon lumber shippers last week before, he said.

The Oregon Electric, which is owned by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific, operates between Portland and Eugene with branch lines to Sweet Home and the Lebanon area.

Woman Injured in Fall at Mt. Hood

Timberline Lodge, Ore. — (U.P.) A young San Francisco woman was injured Friday afternoon when she slipped near the top of 11,225-foot Mt. Hood, tumbled down a steep snow slope and dropped 30 feet into a crevasse.

Ruth Patschkowski, 25, was descending the mountain with a party of 30 California club climbers when the accident occurred. She suffered a possible rib fracture, shock, contusions and lacerations.

The fall was witnessed through binoculars by Frank Gearhart of Manzanita, Ore. He notified lodge authorities who dispatched a "Snowcat" to make the rescue.

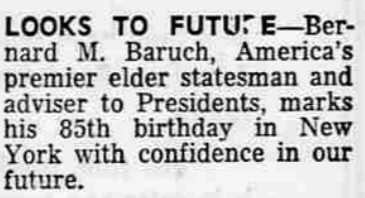

The climbers were on a side trip from Mt. Rainier, Wash., where 120 Sierra club climbers had established a base camp. None of them was roped together and the San Francisco girl was believed to have fallen when she lost one of her crampons.

Portland Man Named President of WPPA

Portland — (U.P.) — Three Portland teenagers were injured, two of them seriously, when they were thrown from their speeding car which went out of control Friday afternoon.

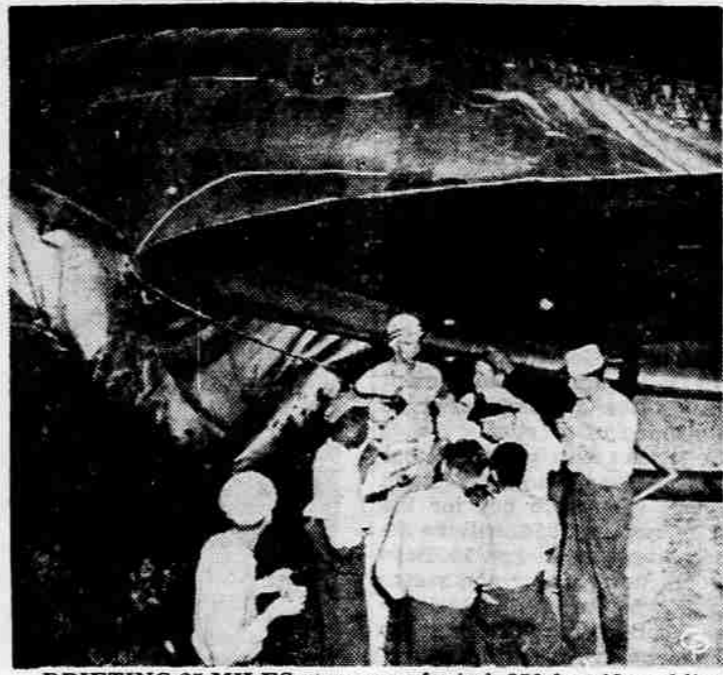

In fair condition at Good Samaritan hospital was Michael Carroll, 16, the driver. His two companions, 16-year-old Tom Coakes and 14-year-old Ralph Marketwitz, were listed in critical and satisfactory condition respectively.

The U. S. imported 17,700,000 tons of iron ore in 1954.

Snake Handling Cult Slates Tribute to Dead Brother

St. Charles, Va. — (U.P.) — Zealot members of the mountain snake handling faith gathered Saturday night to pay macabre tribute to a late brother by hefting the same deadly diamond-back that killed him.

And even "if we die by fangs," said a sect leader, the worshippers will continue handling snakes rather than alter the "word of God" as set forth in the 16th chapter of St. Mark.

Today's memorial services for the late Rev. Lee Valentine will be held in a mountain grove on the border in the Virginia-Harlan county, Ky., area. Valentine died from a rattler's strike at Ft. Payne, Ala., a week ago Saturday, the 14th member of the faith to die since 1940 as the result of the waird rites.

The worshippers hope to have the same snake on hand for the services but in any case there will be "plenty of serpents there," said the Rev. Oscar Huton, organizer of today's memorial.

Handling snakes is against the law in Kentucky but there were conflicting opinions whether authorities will intervene today.

"They can eat snakes as far as I'm concerned," said Virginia Commonwealth Attorney Edgar Barcon of Lee county. "All they want is publicity but we'll ignore them."

Touring Russian Farmers Take Good Look at LA Area

Los Angeles — (U.P.) — Touring Russian farmers took a quick look at a modern American dairy farm Saturday and then made clear that they "wanted to be alone" for an unofficial, unchaperoned swing around this sprawling city to wind up their nationwide trip.

Their jam-packed 32-day cross-country trip obviously had wearied the Russian farm leaders. So, after a brisk, 90-minute morning tour of a dairy farm in nearby Glendale, the Russians announced that the rest of the day would be devoted to private, unscheduled sightseeing. The press and other official attaches were not invited to accompany them.

The Russians leave this morning by plane for Washington. But it was apparent that the group wanted to see as much of southern California on their own as possible.

Conference Cancelled

A press conference and ranch barbecue scheduled for Saturday were cancelled. Last night the visitors attempted to dodge following newsmen for an unscheduled bus tour of the city—a tour which took them to the shores of the Pacific where one of them—wearing bathing trunks—took a dip.

Seven of the 10 official farm delegates visited the Glendale dairy farm of Roger W. Jessup, a member of the Los Angeles county board of supervisors. The other three farmers missed the bus.

Jessup greeted the Russians individually, shaking their hands. "This is what a politician has to do," he smiled. Then he conducted them on a tour of his farm which has 970 milking cows on 23 acres.

After the tour the visitors had milk, coffee and doughnuts with their hosts instead of the planned barbecue for 125 guests scheduled by Jessup. While posing with Jessup drinking milk, Vladimir Vladimirovich Malskevich, head of the Russian delegation, cracked: "To be photographed with a bottle of milk! The people at home wouldn't believe it."
