OUT OF THE WOODS

By JIM STEVENS

Out First Lumbermen . . .
The first lumber manufacturing operations by white men in the Pacific Northwest were originated and managed by the British, Captain John Meares and the Yankee Captain Robert Gray. Each sawed wood and built a fine ship, literally hewing it out of the wilderness.

The Meares schooner, properly christened Northwest America, was launched on Sept. 19, 1788, in the waters of Friendly Cove, Nootka Sound, on the southwest side of the great island that was to be named for Captain George Vancouver. Just two days earlier Gray had sailed in with his 90-ton ship, the Lady Washington, on his first voyage to the North Pacific from Boston.

Fund Given To Study Witness Testimony
Washington—(U.P.)—The Fund for the Republic announced today it has given $25,000 to the School of Law, Stanford University, to study and analyze the testimony of leading witnesses on Communism.

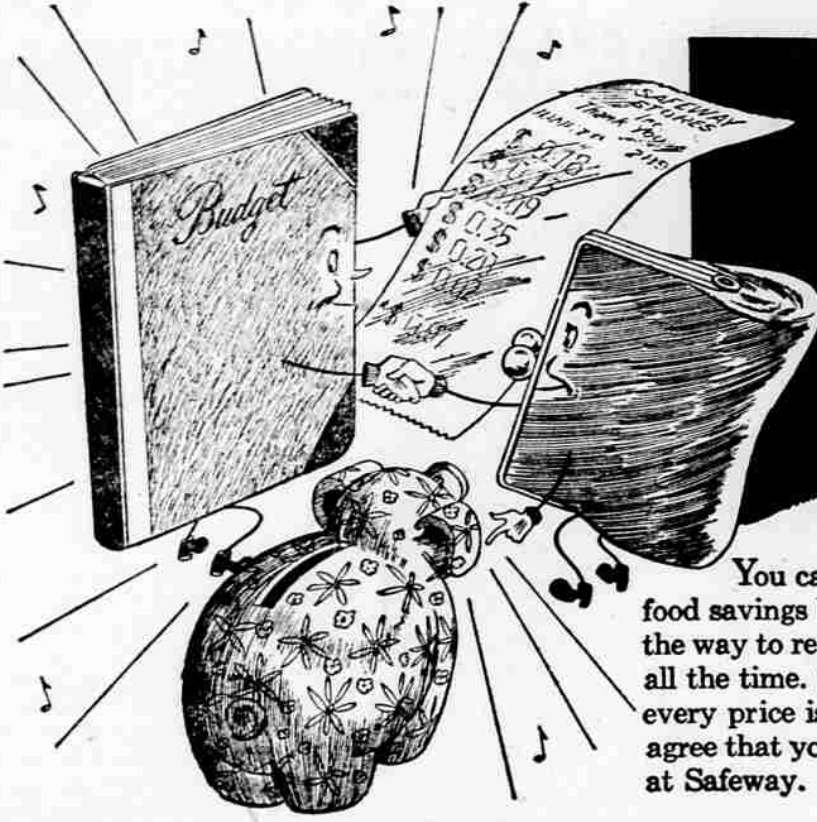

Gray and his crew heartily pitched in with the British and the Chinese of the Meares expedition to aid in the launching and to help celebrate it. The little schooner, fir-beamed and cedar-planked, rode the waves like a dream.

Declassified Research Results Released
Washington—(U.P.)—The government is releasing to the public 961 declassified research reports on the industrial use of atomic energy as a part of President Eisenhower's atom-for-peace plan.

Robert M. Hutchins, Fund President, announced the gift in a report on the activities of the privately financed organization. It received $15,000,000 in December, 1952, from the Ford Foundation to study civil liberties.

Civil Defense Aide Repairs Flood Damage
Titusville, N. J.—(U.P.)—N. Mitchell Bannerman, who worked in the state Civil Defense Control Headquarters on New Jersey's floods since Friday, today was repairing flood damage at his own home. He returned to find his front lawn washed away and his cellar full of water.
