Ike Pledges Federal Aid To Eastern Flood Victims

President Would Summon Congress To Obtain Money Citizens Urged To Give To Red Cross

Hartford, Conn.—(U.P.)—President Eisenhower said today he would call a special session of Congress "if necessary" to get federal funds for disaster relief in the flood-stricken Eastern states.

Grimly and forcefully, the president pledged the full facilities of the federal government during a conference with governors of six hard-hit states at Bradley Field, Windsor Locks, Conn., near here.

He met with the governors immediately after landing in gloomy weather following an early morning aerial inspection of the flood-ravaged areas. His view, however, was partly spoiled by soupy weather and low-hanging clouds. Mr. Eisenhower made the flying survey after a night flight from Denver, where he has been vacationing.

homer made the flying survey after a night flight from Denver, where he has been vacationing. Promises Federal Aid
His face reddening and his voice rising with feeling, Mr. Eisenhower said in a statement for press, radio and newsreels that he will ask congressional leaders immediately for authority to spend as much as needed to help the flood areas.

"He said he hopes a way will be worked out so the money can be obligated now and appropriated when Congress reconvenes in January.

But "if necessary, I will call a special session to get the money," he declared.
E. Roland Harriman, chairman of the American Red Cross, and Federal Civil Defense Administrator Val Peterson flanked Mr. Eisenhower as he sat at a plain table in a cavernous aircraft hangar on the gloomy, overcast airfield.

The governors of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania and other officials sat at the table or clustered behind them as the President, Harriman and Peterson spoke.

Appeals for Donations
Mr. Eisenhower said the Red Cross appeal "is a chance where each of us can rise to an emergency and prove that the American people, regardless of the limitations on them, can meet an emergency and do it well."

Peterson estimated it may take $75,000,000 in federal aid for the eight states in which major disaster areas have been declared by Mr. Eisenhower. Only $11,500,000 are available now in the President's emergency fund, he said.

The Dalles Dam Worker Killed as Wood Panel Falls Seven Hospitalized By Construction Mishap

The Dalles—(U.P.)—One man was killed and seven others hospitalized here this morning when a piece of wooden panelling weighing from three to four tons fell from a crane onto about 12 men working at The Dalles dam.

Officials of the Atkinson Austerlitz Construction Co. declined to identify the dead man pending notification of next of kin. Used as 'Concrete Form'

The accident occurred at the upstream entrance of the east fish ladder of the dam where a "whirly" crane was swinging the wooden panel into position as a concrete form. Workmen were standing atop the existing concrete to bolt the panel into place.

Engineers said a "structural failure" caused the panel to drop from the crane hook. It plummeted onto the perch occupied by a dozen men, knocking them off scaffolding and tossing some of them about 40 feet into the concrete fish channel below. Others who were not knocked off the scaffold were injured by pieces of flying debris.

The meeting is in connection with possibilities of developing oil in the Sams Valley, Beagle, Ramsey Canyon and Meadows districts. A landowners committee from those areas recently deposited oil right leases in a safe deposit box pending arrangement for exploratory drillings.

The leases were obtained on 12,000 acres of land prior to Natural Resources association, San Jose, attempting to obtain a major oil company to start exploratory drilling.

Several landowners in the Shady Cove area have expressed an interest in exploring oil possibilities in that area.

40-Acre Forest Fire Controlled In Prospect Area

Jackson county's largest forest fire this season was brought under control early this morning, and mopping up operations were expected to start before noon.

About 40 acres of forest service land which recently was cut on a timber sale burned over in the Mill creek area north of Prospect during the night. The fire started about 4 p.m. yesterday, and about 80 men worked all night in controlling the blaze.

80 Men Fight Fire
The 80 men included forest service personnel, state forest patrol men, and employees of Elk Lumber Company.

Tractors, pumps and tankers were used in surrounding the fire, which forest service officials said probably was caused from a fisherman or hiker in the area. Water from Mill creek was used in controlling the fire.

Officials said a few trees remained burning within the line around the fire today, and attempts were being made to extinguish them.

The blaze was potentially dangerous to Douglas Fir stands in the national forest.

Walla Walla Prison Disturbance Quelled

Walla Walla—(U.P.)—A minor disturbance, created by the 18 inmates who triggered last month's riot at the Washington State Prison, was reported today by Prison Warden Lawrence Delmore.

The warden said the prisoners began pounding on their cells and shouting Sunday afternoon. Delmore said he told the prisoners: "If you will be quiet, everything will be all right."

The prisoners, however, continued their demonstration and guards were forced to toss a tear gas bomb into Wing One, where the so-called "hardcore" are kept. The gas broke up the disturbance.

The 18 inmates previously had protested their impending transfer to a maximum security ward at Eastern State Hospital.

Search Continues For Bank Robbers

Umatilla, Ore.—(U.P.)—A two-state search was underway today for three bandits who held up the Inland Empire bank of Umatilla at noon yesterday and escaped with a shopping bag full of cash estimated at $60,000.

Roadblocks along major Oregon and Washington highways netted a young Oklahoma marine and his wife in a red convertible at Kennewick, Wash., but they were later released when police determined they were merely on vacation. Oregon State police were tracking two cars following the robbery, but their leads fizzled out.

Police said only one man entered the bank while another stood guard at the door and a third sat in the getaway car. There were no customers in the bank when the bandit entered, brandishing a revolver. He quietly told three women employees "I'll have to put you in the vault. I'm very sorry but that's the way it will have to be."

The police bandit then herded Mrs. Frank Stewart, assistant cashier; Mrs. James Rafferty, teller, and Mrs. Vernon Stewart, clerk, into the vault and banged the door. He then heaped his shopping bag with money from cash drawers and tellers' cages. On the way out he just about ran into a customer, N. H. Ness. Ness heard the women screaming in the vault. He summoned L. Waid De Vore, cashier, who was at lunch one block away and they released the women.

Charles A. Roberts, Umatilla police chief, said the bandits' shopping bag was "all heaped up" with bills. He said the getaway car was a brown Oldsmobile sedan.

Rebellious Tribes Target of Drive By Tanks, Planes

Rebel Territory Said Encircled

Casablanca, Morocco—(U.P.)—Tank and air-supported French army troops launched a general offensive today against rebellious tribes responsible for the slaughter of French settlers in Morocco's wild interior.

Thousands of soldiers jumped off at 5 a.m. along a 65-mile front into the desolate reaches of the Khenifra and Khouribga region, where four Berber tribes rose against French rule in a series of savage butcheries that brought death to nearly 1000 in Morocco and Algeria.

Territory Said Encircled
First reports said the French had encircled the rebel territory at the foot of the Atlas mountains and moved off into the arid rock-strewn hills to blast out all resistance nests in a series of systematic attack against the Berber villages.

French forces attacked rebel forces in Algeria in the second day of the campaign there to wipe out the anti-French insurgents reported still fighting in the fourth day of bloody terror.

Today's offensive in Morocco centered in the rugged hill country 100 to 150 miles southeast of Casablanca and to the north of Marrakesh. It is wild mountain country where savage Arab tribesmen have lived for centuries.

Area Devastated
Khouribga is a phosphate mining center devastated in the uprisings as if hit by a tornado. It is near the town of Oued Zam, scene of the bloodiest carnage of the entire rebellion.

The security forces attacking today were aided by Vampire jet fighters and tanks.

Similar operations were carried out in Algeria where French troops Monday evacuated and then destroyed nine rebel Arab villages in a series of dawn attacks. The attacks were against outlaws who had used the villages for their headquarters.

France Seeks Compromise
While troops pursued their quarry in the wastelands of the Constantine area of eastern Algeria and in the wrecked towns and villages of the Atlas Mountains, French Premier Edgar Faure and his top ministers met with Moroccan representatives for the second day in the resort town of Aix-Les-Bains, France.

Their goal was a compromise that would retain France's holdings in North Africa but would grant enough independence to meet the demands of Nationalists who touched off the weekend demonstrations to underscore their determination.

Reformatory Inmates Riot in Nebraska

Lincoln, Neb.—(U.P.)—Some 100 inmates of the Nebraska Reformatory rioted last night to cover up an escape attempt, in the third outbreak at a Nebraska prison within a week.

However, the two would be escapees were caught, and the rioters were stripped of their clothing and quickly locked in the reformatory jail or "hole."

The reformatory uprising followed a major riot and $100,000 fire last Tuesday night at the state penitentiary, and a Saturday night uprising at the penitentiary being at the Tuesday night rioters. The Saturday night affair was quelled by guards who fired shotgun volleys at the prison "hole."

Reformatory Supt. George Morris said the reformatory rioters last night "thought they were big penitentiary boys." He said they would get out of the reformatory hole when "we decide they want to be good citizens, and we don't care how long that takes."

Governor To Meet Parents
The governor announced Monday night in Knoxville, Tenn., that he would arrive today to meet personally the parents of the dead children and tour hospitals of four other towns where the injured were taken.

Mayor Leonard Pack, an early arriver at the scene, said the freight train was traveling at full speed along tracks through the heart of this town of 1,725 population and "burst the rear of the bus like a bubble."

Mrs. Sybil Hardaway, a newspaper correspondent, said that when she arrived "the bodies of the children were scattered over the ground, all covered with blood, all mangled."

Stunned Parents Arrive
Paul Giles, engineer of the Cincinnati, New Orleans and Texas Pacific freight train, said he was traveling at full speed but that the warning light was blinking at the crossing.
