WHY NOT CONSULT AN OSTEOPATH?

Forty-eight years ago Dr. Joel Goldthwait published (JAMA, 8-31-'07) the first description of sprain or strain of the sacro-iliac joint. Prior to that time if the possibility of movement at this joint was recognized at all it was recognized by the osteopaths. Certainly Goldthwait's description of sacro-iliac sprain or strain was the very first in medical literature.

Goldthwait's writings irked the big shots of the profession, and they have never given him credit for his contribution.

In 1920 (International Clinics) Drs. P. B. Magnuson and J. S. Coulter, describing the treatment of sacro-iliac sprain or strain by manipulation, made this remarkable comment:

"Unless the medical profession wakes up to the fact that our bodies are built on mechanical principles and that many things that we have groped in the dark about are due to a mechanical fault... we are allowing those, who are little better prepared to practice medicine than mechanics, to make cures where we have failed!"—etc., etc.

The same old hokum bunkum the medical myopes have been spouting since Topsy was a colt. It was in my horse-and-buggy days that, with two other young whippersnappers on the county medical society's board of censors, I persuaded a young osteopath to apply for membership in the county medical society. He had passed the same state board examination for license as had one of the other censors. So, being young and inexperienced in dog-in-the-manger behavior, we recommended the doctor to the medical society.

Wow! Some of the old dogs nearly blew their tops. They not only rejected the osteopath with a growl but, if they could have found a way they would have rejected us along with him. Some good legal authorities say that in some states, at any rate, especially in New York, where the young osteopathic physician was so shamefully treated, a legally licensed osteopathic physician can appeal to the courts in such circumstance and compel the county medical society and the state medical society to admit him or her to membership, if he or she wishes. I wish the osteopaths would do so and teach the old timers a good lesson.

Can you think of a good reason why an osteopathic physician should be required to pass the same examination as an ordinary, regular or homeopathic physician is required to pass to obtain a license to practice, and then have to submit to such abuse by other members of the profession?

And while you're thinking about this, you who pay the piper, tell me one good reason why a school or university should be authorized by the state to grant the degree, Doctor of Medicine or Doctor of Osteopathy to a person who has fulfilled the legal requirements and then say to the doctor: "We were only kidding. You can't practice your profession until you shall have gone hat in hand to the politicians on the state board, who will put you through their

Captain, Chief Mate Die in Sea Saga

San Francisco —(U.P.)— The captain of a Navy transport and the Chief Mate of an American freighter died within a few minutes of each other as the transport sped to the stricken mate's rescue, it was learned today.

The Military Sea Transport Service said Capt. Harold S. Sawyer, 62, of the transport Gen. Daniel Sultan, and Chief Mate Hans Hjelman, 57, of the freighter Alamo Victory, apparently died of heart attacks.

Sawyer's ship was diverted in the Pacific Ocean northeast of Midway Island to rendezvous with the Alamo Victory and take Hjelman aboard for medical treatment.

However, shortly before the two ships were to meet Monday night Hjelman died. The Sultan was notified to resume its course and a few minutes later Sawyer died.

Sawyer was from Greenbrae, Calif., and Hjelman from San Leandro, Calif.

Appeal Filed in Child Custody Case

Hillsboro —(U.P.)— Mr. and Mrs. Charles Remington, foster parents of 9-month-old David Casteel, have filed an appeal here of a juvenile court order of Aug. 9 which awarded the child to its parents in Aloha.

The Remingtons have had custody of the child since shortly after his birth. They will retain temporary custody until a hearing on their adoption petition is held Aug. 31.

Remington goes to trial Sept. 12 in district court on a charge he committed riot when he took the Casteel child from its natural parent's home. The original parents had put little David up for adoption and then changed their mind.

ILL WINDS

Lander, Wyo.—(U.P.)— Lightning may not strike twice in the same place, but that doesn't apply to the wind. Three months ago, Jim Ansapach had a large plate glass window smashed by a gust of wind at his service station here. It cost him $100 to replace it. It was windy again the other day. Another window and another $100 bucks.
