

All's Well To Close Saturday

Ashland — The final performance of "All's Well That Ends Well" will be given at the Shakespearean festival theater Saturday night, and a sell-out house is expected for the popular comedy.

Like many festival productions in the past, "All's Well," was a dark horse this summer. The play is not often produced in the United States, and is seldom on "must" reading lists, but its sharp dialogue and sophisticated humor have made it a favorite with festival audiences this season since the first performance.

The play is directed by Robert Loper, who also directs "Timon of Athens," and plays the lead in "Macbeth" this year. In the lead roles are festival veteran Richard Graham as the King of France, William Oyler as the braggart Captain Parolles, Donald Soule as Bertram, Joan Kugell as Helena, and Marjorie Schaffer as the Countess of Rouillon.

Saturday's performance is the first in the last round of plays to be given by the festival this season. The first performance of "Timon of Athens," this week changed the order of the plays, and festival patrons are asked to check the schedule before ordering tickets for the rest of the plays. "All's Well," will be followed on Sunday by "Henry VI, part 3," on Monday by "Timon," on Tuesday by "Macbeth," and the season closes Wednesday with "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

Goods seats for all performances are still available at the theatre box office in Ashland, or at the branch box office in the lobby of the First National Bank, Medford.

Miss Leegard, whose parental home is Oslo, Norway, was formerly a schoolmate of the bride at Central Institute of the Deaf in St. Louis, Mo.

Miss Leegard taught last winter at Tracy school for the deaf in Los Angeles. She became interested in working with the deaf through her father, an Oslo physician who specializes in diseases of the head.

Blue Star Chapter Honors Member

Mrs. R. W. Denman was honored at a recent meeting of Chapter 2, Blue Star Mothers, held at the home of Mrs. Fred Middlebush, 1517 West Main street.

Mrs. Denman, who is moving to California, was a charter member of the chapter and is now serving as department historian.

The president summarized work done by the group in the first six months of the year. The women have made 28 laundry bags and two afghans for veterans at Camp White, and have also contributed such articles as pocket books and used clothing for the men without pensions.

The group sponsors a games party for wheel chair patients at the camp the fourth Friday of each month, and provides homemade cake and coffee. Attendance has averaged 28 veterans at each party, and 30 cartons of cigarettes were given as prizes during the first six months of the year.

In May the women sold Blue Star daisies on the city's streets, and the proceeds from this sale defrays the expenses of the Camp White projects. Blue Star Mothers report that the group does service work in 41 of the 176 veteran hospitals in this country.

Any woman having a son or daughter now in service and that has served since World War II is invited to join the chapter.

As We Live

CHILDREN MUST LEARN TO BE APPRECIATIVE

It is a common fault of parents whose own childhoods have been difficult to bend over backward to make their children's childhood days easy.

(Q) "I simply can't understand my children. We have a boy of 15 and a girl of 13. My wife and I have done everything we could to make them happy, because we both came from large families where money was pretty scarce. I have a good business and have been able to give my family most of the things they want. The children feel imposed upon if their mother asks them to do anything around the house, even making their own beds, and they are always asking for more spending money, more clothes, and more amusements. I simply can't understand why they show so little appreciation for all we have done for them. Have we been too easy?"

(A) From what you have said, you and your wife have no one to blame but yourselves for your children's lack of appreciation. You wanted to give them the

Dr. Herlock

Assign Responsibilities No matter how tempted you may be to continue handing things to your children, don't do it. Give them things only when they make some effort to do things for you and your wife. Assign them responsibilities in the home, and put them on a strict allowance. It will take time to change their attitudes, but if you keep to this policy I have suggested I think you will find it pays in the long run. Your children will be happier and more appreciative. French Woman Claims World Jump Record

Paris—(U.P.)—A French woman today claimed a new world record for the women's parachute jump. Odette Rousseau said she jumped from 28,225 feet, fell five miles and opened her parachute only 1,313 feet above the ground. She landed in a river but was rescued. The previous record was held by a Russian woman named Soutanova with a four and one-half mile free-fall jump in 1952.
