

Terry Brereton Tells Of Flower Show, Trip Along Rhine River

(Editor's Note: Terry Brereton of Medford is now in Europe as a delegate to an international YMCA meeting. This is another in a series of articles he is writing about his experiences for The Mail Tribune.)

By TERRY BRERETON

Hannover was the first place we stopped at in Germany. The first day, we were shown the city by bus. On the morning of July 21, the delegation went to Hohenschwanau Gardens. After lunch at the YMCA we started out for Kassel.

During the afternoon we spent two hours at the YMCA camp of Kassel. This camp is for German boys and girls and for the children of American Armed Forces men stationed in Germany. The camp is situated on a hill covered with beautiful forest land.

The next morning, in Kassel, we went to the German Garden and Flower Show.

The show was the most beautiful one of its kind I have ever seen. When we first entered the gate, it did not look like much of a flower show. Then we rode a ski lift down into the valley. It was then that we could see the emensity and beauty of it all. The lift went over beds of different types of flowers, trees and bushes. There was a miniature golf course and train. If you wanted to see the show sitting down, you could hop on the train and it would take you for a ride around the grounds.

In the afternoon we went to the German National YMCA headquarters. We were served tea and then given a talk about the job of the headquarters.

On July 23, we went to Cologne. The German spelling is Koln. On the way there, we stopped for lunch at the German

Youth Resettlement village at Kastrop-Raukel. The village was set up for boys who work in the coal mines. They have a very nice outdoor swimming pool, which was crowded during our visit.

After leaving Kastrop Raukel, we traveled on autobahn. The autobahn is the highway which Hitler had built across Germany, to transport his troops.

Our one day in Cologne was spent in touring the city, visiting the cathedral, and taking an excursion to Bonn, the capital of Western Germany.

Bonn is not a very large city. You may wonder why such a small city was made the capital, looking forward to the day when their country will be united once again. When it is united they want Berlin to be the capital. Instead of having a large city as capital now, they have placed it in Bonn to make the change easier when the time comes.

Travel on Rhine

After leaving Bonn, our bus took us to Koblenz, where we started our Rhine river boat trip. The banks of the river are covered with vineyards, and the hills are crowned with castles. Our bus met us at Rudesheim and took us the rest of the way to Heidelberg.

While in Heidelberg, we visited the old Heidelberg castle. It is in a remarkable state of preservation.

In the wine cellar there are huge vats. They were used to store thousands of gallons of wine and beer. The largest vat, which was filled once a year, was large enough to build a dance floor on the top. The smaller vats were filled twice a year.

The rest of the day was spent in shopping for souvenirs.

We arrived at Konstanz, late in the evening on July 27. The hostel which greeted us was the nicest and most modern of all the ones which we encountered during our European tour.

On July 28, the delegation went on a tour into Switzerland. We stopped at St. Gallen for a lunch of cows tongue. After lunch the city watch dealers made quite a few sales.

While we were on the boat coming to Europe, we were told by many persons about the good watch buys in Switzerland. Everybody was anxious to get to the country and buy watches for themselves and for relatives. I was no exception. On the way back to Konstanz, we were in a heavy fog. We were very disappointed because we could not get a very good picture of the Alps.

The next day we were invited to lunch at the YMCA headquarters, at Castle Mianau. After lunch we had a speaker tell us about the program there. It is mostly a conference school for YMCA members around the world.

The owner of the castle, count Bernadought, gave the right wing of the castle to the YMCA. This act is another instance which shows how friendly people are to the YMCA all over the world.

Man Earns Five College Diplomas

Cincinnati — (U.P.) — Joseph Gehler, 37, clerk in the cost department of a local cutlery manufacturing firm, has just received his fifth University of Cincinnati diploma in 18 years.

"Some people collect postage stamps; I collect college diplomas," Gehler explained.

His latest is a certificate in accounting for Evening College studies. Earlier he received from the local university bachelor of arts, bachelor of industrial management, bachelor of science in commerce and master of arts degrees.

Next September he will resume his Evening College studies with his eyes on a certificate of associate in accounting.

First 11 Hardest

The first 11 years were the hardest, for it took him that long to complete his bachelor of arts requirements through evening courses and daytime studies over several summers.

Since then, attending university classes has become a habit.

In off-campus life, Gehler is still a bachelor. Chuckling that his degrees haven't impressed the girls, he philosophizes that sometimes he "gets a feeling girls are more interested in money and good looks than they are in the college degrees a man has."

Gehler once intended to put his accumulated knowledge to use in the teaching profession but was sidetracked because he lacks a degree in education.

"That just happens to be one degree I haven't got around to yet," he explained.

Man Must Hold Loyalties in Tension

Lafayette, Ind. — (U.P.) — Man must hold his loyalties to church and state in a "constant tension," Methodist Bishop Gerald Kennedy of Los Angeles said today.

He told the five-day National Convocation of Methodist Youth that man can neither withdraw from the state nor do whatever it commands.

"The Christian society recognizes it has no right to make such demand," Kennedy said, "so it provides the right of men to be excused from its demands when conscience insists."

The bishop also criticized a political atmosphere which makes the "egg head" label a kiss of death.

"All the name means is that a man is intellectually inclined and interested in ideas and theories," Kennedy said. "Has the time come when American politics prefer the ignorant to the learned, the mediocre to the superior, the mediocre to the second-rate to the best?"

REFUSAL EXPENSIVE

Denver — (U.P.) — It cost Olin E. Goddard, 18, $50 to refuse to allow a motorist to pass him on a Denver street. The motorist was policeman Walter J. Beringer.

As We Live

Divorce always brings problems for all involved. Running away seldom helps.

(Q) "I married a divorced man a little over a year ago. I had never met his first wife, because she had gone back to her folks' home in another city before the divorce. She was a very good friend of one of our neighbors and is planning to come to visit this neighbor soon. The neighbor told my husband and invited him to come to see his ex-wife. I think this neighbor resents men; she is very cool and distant. Naturally, I am upset at the prospect of my husband's seeing his first wife again. I have suggested that he take his vacation at that time, but he says he can't get away from work. I think he wants to see her again, and I wonder if it will mean that he will decide he wants her back. I have felt for some time that he is still in love with her. What would you advise me to do?"

(A) Stand your ground. Problems of this sort are bound to arise, and you must be prepared to meet them. It may turn out better than you think, but that will be up to you.

If your husband wants to see his former wife, don't put obstacles in his way. Let him call on your neighbor, but don't accompany him. You may run across his first wife in the neighborhood, but don't go out of your way to do so. It might prove to be embarrassing for both of you.

The most important thing is your attitude. Don't be petty, and don't cling to your husband. Nothing would make him regret his divorce more than to feel that you were tying him to apron strings. The other wife may be coming to try to win him back and may be at her very best.

Be prepared to beat her at her own game. Look your best and be your most agreeable self while she is around. Don't accuse him of spending too much time with her or of liking her better than you. If you are unconcerned, things will work out better than if you allow yourself to get upset.
