

Mrs. Clara Rhoades Hostess for Meeting Of Grandmothers

Last meeting of Rogue chapter, Grandmothers' club, was held at the home of Mrs. Clara Rhoades, 940 Whitman street. Dessert was served in the garden.

Mrs. Cyril Gay and Mrs. Ann Hartley were assistant hostesses. Mrs. Rex conducted the business and Mrs. H. G. Wilson led singing.

The traveling prize was won by Mrs. W. W. Hartley and then given to Mrs. Mable Carr for her daughter who recently lost her home by fire.

Next meeting of the club will be at the home of Mrs. C. R. Alexander, 206 Cottage street.

To remove rust stain from fabrics, soak the stain in lemon juice, moisten with lemon juice and salt and place over a steaming tea kettle. Or, dampen the spot with cream of tartar and let stand 1 hour before washing. Repeat if necessary.

Minister, Wife To Attend Session In Oklahoma City

The Rev. and Mrs. F. Wildon Colbaugh left Monday afternoon for Oklahoma City, Okla., to attend the general council of the Assemblies of God which begins Thursday, September 1 and continues to September 6.

They will represent Medford Assembly of God, 1108 West Main street at the national convocation, which is the official biennial business meeting of the Assemblies of God. National officers will be elected at this time and business and policies of the denomination will be determined during the meetings.

The pastor expects to return to Medford on September 10 and will be in the pulpit at the Medford Assembly of God Sunday, September 11.

College Faculty Members Attend Plays in Ashland

Ashland — Four members of the faculty of Washington State college, Pullman, have been in Ashland this month to see the Oregon Shakespearean festival plays.

In the valley now are A. W. Thompson, dean of the School of Arts and Sciences, and Mrs. Thompson, and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Hegland, Mr. Hegland being an instructor in the English department. Earlier this season Nelson A. Ault, also of the English department, and his wife saw the plays.

Also in Ashland now are Mr. and Mrs. Philip Hanson. Mr. Hanson, who was one of the festival actors and directors for a number of years, is now a speech and drama instructor for Washington State college. The Hansons are visiting Mrs. Hanson's mother, Mrs. Una LaMarre, and her father, E. J. LaMarre, of Ashland. The couple visited here earlier, continued south into California for a few weeks and will leave soon to return to Pullman for the opening of the fall semester.

New Yorkers Here On Brief Visit; Leave for South

Mrs. O. H. Bengtson, Oregon terrace, had as week end guests her elder daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Conant Jr., Syracuse, N.Y., his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Conant Sr., also of Syracuse, and Tod Conant, grandson of Mrs. Bengtson and son of the younger Conants.

The party left Monday afternoon by car for San Francisco by way of the Redwood highway.

In San Francisco, Mrs. Bengtson will meet her younger daughter, Patricia Crow, and the two will vacation in Las Vegas. On Sept. 10 Mrs. Bengtson will sail for Hawaii.

Return

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred S. V. Carpenter, Old Stage road, returned home Sunday from Portland where they spent a few days on business.

State Fair To Open Saturday With "Gay Nineties" Theme

Salem — Oregon's 90th State Fair will open here Saturday, September 3, with every prospect of being as gay as its "Gay Nineties" theme.

The eight-day fair will continue through Saturday, September 10, with special entertainment scheduled every afternoon and evening.

"Bigtime" features of the state fair will include a circus that, it is reported, soon will be featured at Disneyland, a stage revue headlined by television's most famous chimpanzee, thoroughbred running races on Lone Oak oval and, in the stock barns, the Western Aberdeen Angus Breeders' Futurity.

The midway will have a new look that will include two permanent new rides — a roller coaster and a "tunnel of love," plus dozens of traditional riding devices.

New picnic tables have been erected in the picnic area. Both the garden and flower show and the farm machinery exhibits will be larger than presented last year.

The land products show is enlarged so much that the famous scene booth has been crowded away from the corner it has occupied for many years.

Big pumpkins, big corn and carrot stalks and big sunflowers will be featured along with other exhibits in the land products show where over 500 cash prizes will be awarded.

Farm and city wives will be back to compete for "Queen of the Kitchen" honors in the foods department, which also will be presented in enlarged quarters.

Pie baking has been added to all customary classifications such as pickles, jam, food freezing and cake baking in the big foods department.

Advance interest indicates the textile department also will bulge with a record-breaking number of exhibits. Emphasis is on quilts this year, although all customary classifications will be repeated.

The circus, scheduled three times on Sunday of State Fair week and twice on other days, will feature the Cristiani brothers, and Bailey brothers, combined circus, featuring the Cristiani family of international fame. A national magazine recently called them "Big Top's Royal Family." Their big circus includes all traditional circus specialties — elephants, clowns, trapeze performers — and with special emphasis on feats of horsemanship, several of which are performed only by members of the Cristiani family.

The Helene Hughes revue, scheduled for presentation at 8 p.m. nightly in front of the grandstand, will include "Zippy," a chimpanzee that has been featured on many leading television networks.

The revue, featuring comedy and music, also will include Day, Dawn, and Dusk, nationally-known vocal trio; Bobby Winters, comedy juggler; Fred Sanborn, comedy pantomimist and xylophone player; The Shephard Brothers, Swiss bell artists; The Los Gatos, acrobatic tumblers; Johnny Matson, musical master of ceremonies; and the State Fair orchestra.

Two extra, free two-hour shows and an extra circus performance are scheduled for Sunday.

Mills Develop New Process for Printing Fabrics

New York—Another interesting marriage of fashion and science took place in New York recently, when Wamsutta Mills introduced dress fabrics using a revolutionary new printing process that achieved three-dimensional effects.

The patterns, known as "camera prints" will be in fine department stores within a few weeks for home sewers, and will be seen in resort clothes within a few months.

Developed in Italy, the new printing process involves a "dry printing" method and the use of a very fine screen. This fine screen and the elimination of "wet inks" is reported to preserve all details and highlights with the actual imprinting taking place without blurring or over-lapping.

One of the most interesting of these new "camera prints" is the reproduction of fine Chantilly lace on cotton satin. The fabric looks like a fine overlace, and the reproduction is so clear and sharp that the tiny flaws in the hand-made lace used in the photography are plainly visible. Groupings of garden fresh peppers are also reproduced by the process, again on cotton satin, and the shining highlights of the peppers is captured so completely the design looks three dimensional as well as beautiful.

The patterns for the new fabrics are also Italian, done by Stella Pines, one of Europe's top textile designers whose fabrics have long been highlights of the collections of the great fashion houses of Rome and Paris.

In addition to the exciting new "camera prints," Miss Pines has designed a group of Wamsutta fabrics known as Sicilian Needlepoint, where the print reproduces the overall effect of fine needlepoint in fresh new fashion colors such as mauve and a deep rich pink.
