As We Live

By ELIZABETH HURLOCK, PH.D. WIDOWER SHOULD PUT OWN INTERESTS FIRST

There are times when a person must think about himself and his interests first.

((Q) "My wife died ten years ago when my two daughters were in their teens. They both begged me not to remarry, as they had heard from some of their friends about how stepmothers treat their stepdaughters. They claimed that they could take care of the home and they did more than most girls their age. I had my widowed mother come to live with us and things worked out pretty well, though I was lonely. My daughters were out on dates most evenings, and my mother, whose health was none too good, went to bed early.

"Now my daughters are both married and in homes of their own. My mother passed away a year ago, and I am all alone. I have met a woman nearly my age—a widow with a 16-year-old daughter. I have been seeing quite a lot of her and my daughters have heard about it. They are both very much upset at the prospect of my remarrying and urge me to come and live with one of them. I feel that I would be a fifth wheel on the wagon with either of them, and I prefer to be in my own home, perhaps with this widow as my wife. Should I listen to them as I did after their mother died?"—J.R.

(A) No, you should not listen to your daughters now. You were wise to listen to their pleas when they were teenagers because, feeling as they did about a stepmother, life would have been very difficult for you had you remarried. But things have changed. Your daughters have their own homes and you no longer have the companionship of your mother. Why shouldn't you think of your own interests first now? Happy Marriage Possible

If you are fond of this widow, if you and she are companionable, and if her daughter does not have the antagonistic attitude toward a stepfather that your own daughters had toward a stepmother, there is no reason why you should not have a happy marriage.

Give your daughters an opportunity to get to know this widow and her daughter, but do not allow their attitudes to influence your final decision. If they refuse to accept her as a member of the family, they will be the losers. They surely must see that this would be a better solution to your problem than going to live with either of them.

Safeway Increases Retail Coffee Prices

New York—(U.P.)—Consumer prices for coffee will be upped one to four cents a pound today in some chain stores.

Increases announced yesterday by Safeway Stores Inc., and H. C. Bohack Co. Inc., followed a three-cent boost last week in wholesale prices by four of the nation's leading coffee roasters.

Roasters blamed their action on higher prices for green coffee, which in turn followed higher costs in the Brazilian and Colombian markets.

Safeway's private brands will be affected, with "Airway" brand up a cent and "Nob Hill," up four cents a pound. Bohack boosted its "Manor Brand" one cent and its "Bocris" and "Royal" brands four cents on its vacuum-packed "Supreme" brand.
