Man Gives Wrong Answer, Wins Car, But Can't Drive

Hollywood — (U.P.) — A San Diego, Calif., man whose eyesight is so poor he can't obtain a driver's license Saturday won a new $8,700 auto by answering incorrectly a geography question.

The winner's name—J. Reed Thompson, 47, was drawn from a cement mixer loaded with 500,000 names outside a local radio station KNX celebrating its 35th anniversary with a "birthday bonanza" of $65,000 in prizes.

Thompson was telephoned by the station and asked, "In what city is Signal Hill located?"

"Long Beach," he answered, and the station said he was right and entitled to the car. But seconds later the calls began coming from Signal Hill, Calif., residents insisting their community was incorporated and not a part of adjacent Long Beach.

The station ruled that since Thompson's answer had been accepted, he would keep his prize.

He said that a friend would come here next week to pick up the car for him. Thompson's married, but his wife's eyesight is about the same as his.

Turkish Officers Suspended Pending Riot Investigation

Istanbul — (U.P.) — Turkish Prime Minister Adnan Menderes announced Saturday that three high-ranking Army officers have been suspended pending an outcome of an inquiry into the recent riots.

He named them in a broadcast as Gen. Vedat Garan, commander of the 4th Army; Gen. Fazil Bilge, commander of the City of Istanbul, and Brig. Gen. Nedim Erensoy, commander of the Istanbul garrison.

The Premier's broadcast gave no further details.

Investigation Under Way
Security police disclosed earlier that an investigation was being made and said most of those arrested for the anti-Greek riots were refugees from Western Thrace who had sought refuge in Turkey during the last month.

Security police said the fact that the riots started at the same time both in Ismir and Istanbul showed it was carried out by a plan, possibly led by the Communists, and was arranged by an organization having headquarters in Beirut.

$3,000,000 Addition To Lloyd's Announced

Portland — (U.P.) — J. J. Newberry company Saturday announced plans for a $3,000,000 store at the proposed Lloyd shopping center in Portland.

The Newberry store, according to J. E. Nelson, president of the national variety chain, would be located at the north end of the shopping project, just south of N.E. Broadway.

The store was tentatively planned for 1957, Nelson said. It would employ 500 persons and its sales volume was expected to exceed $4,000,000.
