Video's Pinky Lee Collapses on Show

Hollywood — (U.P.) — Bouncy Pinky Lee today may leave a hospital where he was rushed after collapsing during his TV show, one of the nation's top-rated day programs watched by millions of children.

The veteran comedian, suffering from nervous exhaustion, collapsed on stage yesterday in his coast-to-coast NBC show. He complained during a commercial that he was feeling dizzy, then clutched his throat and fell to the stage after about 20 minutes of the half-hour show.

An ambulance rushed Lee to St. Joseph's hospital in Burbank. Electro-cardiographs disclosed he had not suffered a heart attack. Dr. Theodore Mainzer said Lee was suffering from nervous exhaustion.

The network blacked out the screen and substituted musical selections for the remaining 10 minutes of the show. An ambulance rushed Lee to St. Joseph's hospital in Burbank. Electro-cardiographs disclosed he had not suffered a heart attack. Dr. Theodore Mainzer said Lee was suffering from nervous exhaustion.

USS Wasp Officer Sought in Fund Probe

San Francisco — (U.P.) — The disbursing officer of the carrier USS Wasp was sought by naval intelligence officers today for questioning in regard to a reported "discrepancy" in the ship's accounts.

A Navy spokesman who declined to be quoted by name identified the missing officer as Ens. D. J. Page of New York City. He said the young officer failed to return from a week end liberty Monday, and a preliminary check of his financial records "indicates a discrepancy" in his accounts.

The spokesman declined to state how much appeared to be missing, but said the disbursing officer had access to about $165,000 including about $70,000 in ready cash.

The Wasp is presently undergoing repairs at the San Francisco Naval shipyard.

Mexicans Threatened by Rocket in 1947

Los Angeles — (U.P.) — Two rocket experts say that lives of thousands of persons in Juarez, Mex., were threatened in 1947 when a huge V-2 rocket fired in White Sands, N.M., went "haywire" and in the wrong direction.

George L. Meredith and Donald Thompson, of White Sands, told the American Rocket society meeting here yesterday that another rocket also went awry and almost landed in Alamogordo, N.M.

"It was very fortunate that none of the many possible casualties that might have resulted from these wild missiles in 1947 took place," said Meredith. "The rocket that hit Juarez and presumably endangered El Paso, Tex., was supposed to fly north but flew south instead. The one that just missed Alamogordo wandered east."

Since 1947 the two experts said a special safety group has developed new radar and optical devices which keep track of the missiles and can explode them if they get out of control.
