

Newspapers Agree Ike Won't Run Again; Nixon Draws Prominent Mention

By UNITED PRESS
A cross section of the nation's newspapers agreed today that President Eisenhower will probably not run again in 1956. Vice-President Richard M. Nixon was the most prominently mentioned substitute candidate.

Many of the editorial writers hesitated to make a flat prediction that Mr. Eisenhower's heart attack will force his retirement from politics.

But others said an Eisenhower candidacy next year is "inconceivable."

Nixon, who is already taking over some of the President's duties, was regarded by many as the most probable Republican candidate if Mr. Eisenhower bows out.

The closest to an endorsement came from the Chicago Sun-Times. It said that if Mr. Eisenhower doesn't run, the GOP would "do well" to choose Milton S. Eisenhower, the President's brother and the man who could best "mirror his thoughts, ideals, and principles."

Others mentioned were former Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, twice GOP candidate for the presidency, and Gov. Goodwin J. Knight of California, Christian Herter of Massachusetts, William Stratton of Illinois and Fred Hall of Kansas.

Still more were Henry Cabot Lodge, U. S. ambassador to the United Nations, and Sen. Clifford Case of New Jersey.

Chief Justice Earl Warren also drew attention, but it was pointed out that he has previously said he would not run under any conditions.

Newspapers which said editorially that Mr. Eisenhower's health has all but ruled out a second term included the Chicago Daily Tribune, the Detroit Free Press, the Detroit News, the Tampa Tribune, the Charlotte, S.C., News, the Charlotte Observer, the Washington Post and Times-Herald, and the Washington Evening Star.

Other newspapers praised President Eisenhower for setting up his administration in such a way that it can run smoothly during his illness.

These included the New York Herald Tribune, the New York World-Telegram and Sun, the Los Angeles Times, the Columbus, O., Citizen and the Boston Globe.

The broadest predictions on the political effects of Mr. Eisenhower's illness came from newspapers in the South, where Democratic strength is concentrated.

The Tampa Tribune said the Democratic presidential nomination "now begins to look like a gilt-edged pass to the White House" and the Charlotte Observer commented "there are no other 'Ikes' in the GOP stable."

The Atlanta Constitution warned "the people do not have any great confidence in Vice-President Nixon . . . There is grave danger the administration may disintegrate."

But the Los Angeles Times praised Nixon as "the President's chosen instrument."

South Dakota Buffalo Herd Said Money-Maker
Pierre, S.D.—(U.P.)—The buffalo herd in Custer State Park in the Black Hills of South Dakota is a money-maker.

The herd is growing so rapidly that it must be continually thinned out to keep it within the capacity of the grazing range.

The meat is sold, and the receipts are the major source of revenue for the park. The meat—which sells at about 30 cents a pound per quarter—brought in nearly $88,000 last fiscal year.
