Pickin' Pears News and Notes From Camp White

By SID HOLLINGSWORTH
Mrs. Rita E. Barcus of Roseburg, is the new chairman of the Medford-Roseburg Hospital Council of the American Red Cross. She succeeds Mrs. John Day, of the Jackson County chapter, who has held the post during the past two years. The council met at the VA domiciliary for their regular quarterly session last Friday afternoon. Appropriation of money for gifts and activities during the fall season, including Christmas, was authorized. In addressing the gathering Mrs. Day reported an increasing amount of interest in Red Cross work since the succession of clisters, including the recent forest fires in this area.

Mrs. Rose Christendom of Roseburg is secretary of the council. Those present were: Mrs. John Day, Mrs. Ruth Gordon, Mrs. Marie Rehling, representing Jackson county; Mrs. Rita Barcus, Mrs. Edith Rada-baugh, Mrs. Grace Raymond, Douglas county, Mrs. Ruth Otto, Miss Betty Simon, Josephine county, and Mrs. Herbert Clarke and Mrs. E. H. Peterson, of Lane county.

VA and Red Cross consultants included: Frank Glonning and Robert Kidder, in charge of special services at Camp White and Roseburg respectively, General Curtis Beecher, field consultant, and Acting Manager R. H. Denning.

Home members who draw clothing run to medium size so far as their feet are concerned. The Supply department found this out in checking over the surplus stock for the year. They had six pairs of shoes, size 10 and over, and the same number between 5 and 6. They advertised the fact in a notice and five of the size 10 pairs were sold.

Assistant Manager R. H. Denning will have an opportunity to apply some of the new methods of hospital management this week during the absence of Manager E. K. Ricker, who is attending the conference of VA managers at Albuquerque, N.M. Denning has just returned from the 23rd Chicago Institute of the American College of Hospital Administrators at which 106 participants from 36 states, Hawaii, Canada and Mexico were in attendance at the 10-day session. He was one of 10 VA assistant managers selected for the course, and served as president of the institute, held at the University of Chicago.

A banquet, honoring Dr. Malcolm T. MacEachern, the dean of hospital administrators, was held at International House after the final session at which time he presented the graduating certificates.

Senator Richard Neuberger dropped his political role in his recent Washington letter to capture some of the spirit of the ages commenting on his dedication address at the site of the Lewis and Clark salt cairn in Seaside. Said the Senator: "We looked out to sea on the same ocean they had seen, on the same headlands and capes, on the same crags of Tillamook Rock. Men and women come and go in their brief span; the works of the Almighty endure. "No person, be he president or millionaire or governor or senator, can feel himself important if he considers our own fleeting role on the earth's immense stage." One of the woodworkers in crafts has attracted considerable attention because of his skill in making bows and arrows. They have all of the finish and expert attention to stresses and strains that appeal to archery enthusiasts. Regner Rehn has been following this hobby for the past 15 years up in Alaska and in the state of Washington where he learned the craft while attached to a CCC camp there. His instructor was Fred Powers, who was a teacher at Central Point before he moved north. Rehn is an example of what the almost forgotten Civilian Conservation Corps did for the young men who became prepared for the war years to follow and the arts of peace and contentment afterward. The wood required for the best bows is either yew or lemon, he says. But a strong bow is made from a special laminated product. The ancient "triple" bow, giving power, is one of the styles he makes.

News About Books From the Library

By MISS HELEN WEBSTER
Medford Librarian
"One social movement of the last 100 years has stood out above all others—the rise of women." So says Inez Irwin, the author of "Angels and Amazons."

Your public library has been an interested witness of that movement during the past half-century. In 1912, for instance, its trustees were pondering the propriety of allowing women to hold a meeting within its staid walls to discuss the question of their own suffrage.

This week, observed nationally as Business and Professional Women's Week, opened Sunday with a tea at the Medford hotel at which books and bulletins concerning women in business were on display.

Rights Established
Inez Irwin continues to point out that women's right to vote and her right to work were fairly well established with the World War. The bitter and belligerent early feminist has given way, she remarks, to the professional woman assured of her right to a place in the business world, and of her right to have both marriage and a career.

And yet the problem of women in business is not entirely solved. Esther Harding, out of her broad experience as a practicing physician and consulting psychologist, discusses it further in her book, "The Way of All Women." Why do women work? For pin money? To get away from housework? These questions are answered in a study, "Why Women Work," published by the Public Affairs Committee. Using material drawn from a questionnaire issued by the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, the committee finds that 48 per cent of employed women have dependents solely or partially dependent on their marriage. Success Stories

"Successful Women and How They Attained Success" is a collection of human interest stories about American women who have attained fame or fortune in their chosen professions. Suggestions for opportunities in business open to women and the behavior that leads to success are outlined in "She Strives to Conquer," by Frances Maule. Miss Maule has also written "Girl With a Pay Check; How She Lands It—Holds It, Makes It Grow."

"There Is a Right Job for Every Woman" maintains Anne Heywood in her book by that title. Whether you want to improve the caliber of your current work, you'll find young women in business and covers almost every conceivable problem they meet.

Aviation, Advertising
"Needed—Women in Aviation" is a book by Dicker Meyer that may be just the suggestion you need. Or you may find Estelle Hamburger's book, "It's a Woman's Business," a gay, informal story of a career in advertising even more enticing.

"Ladies of the Press," by Ishbel Ross reviews with gusto the history of women in journalism. These by no means exhaust your public library's resources in vocational books for women, but since Business and Professional Women's Week is followed this year by National Newspaper Week, the brisk, thumb-nail biographies of women who have made an important contribution to newspaper writing in this country of "Ladies of the Press" seems an appropriate place to stop.

Prisoner Found Meal, Policeman Discovers

Detroit—(U.P.)—Elmer Moore, 34, told a policeman who arrested him Tuesday while trying to break into an auto that he was looking for something to eat. When the policeman, Alex Scott, arrived at headquarters with his prisoner, he found that Moore had eaten the lunch he had left in the back seat of his patrol car.
