

State Senator Says Education "Pawn" at Present

Portland—Education and educators can no longer remain pawns on the chessboard to be moved this way and that at political whim," stated State Senator Mark Hatfield at a Wednesday evening dinner meeting of the Portland Division of the Oregon Education association at Lincoln High School.

Senator Hatfield told the audience of over 400 educators and lay persons that "the educational profession has bought a ticket to the football game and its members are in the grandstand." "We can no longer leave to Cecil Posey and Robert Phelps (OEA staff members) the responsibility of shaping the educational decisions of the day at the legislature," said the youthful Williamette university dean of students. He fired a volley at teachers, administrators, and school board members who still hold the mistaken idea that education can remain aloof from politics.

The senator pleaded that educators should give consideration to the establishment of a secretary of education with full cabinet rank and to break education away from health and welfare. He explained that this was "not to greater federal encroachment but to give proper emphasis to education along with labor, commerce, foreign affairs, etc." He further pointed out that other countries have ministers of education.

He next emphasized that an informed public has the right to lay the pros and cons of the issues of the day before the student. "Are we raising a generation of political neophytes?" queried Senator Hatfield. "There is just as great a shortage of good political talent as there is of teachers."

The term politician and its connotations can be partially blamed on the politicians themselves. However, they are a product of our educational system and a public that stands for corruption, conniving, etc., "is the same public that passed through the educational system," Senator Hatfield continued.

"If we leave public discussion and public participation to the non-educators, we are not making the maximum use of our brain power," stated the speaker. He explained that in the days to come, manpower would take an even more remote back seat to brainpower than at present.

The talk was entitled, "Education From the Grandstand and the Scrimmage Line."

Cheri Lynn Brownell Celebrates Birthday With Party at Home

Cheri Lynn Brownell celebrated her seventh birthday September 22 with a party at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Brownell Jr.

A swimming party had been planned, but the weather was too cool and the party was held indoors. Games were played and prizes presented to the winners.

Attending were Karol Dvorak, Michael Coffman, Timmy Gunn, Leonard Arnold, Sandra Melton, Toni Fagone, Cheryl Bramhall, Nancy Edmonds, Linda Hendrickson, Lillian Bailey, Bobby Kline, Terri McDermott and Eddie Brownell, Cheri Lynn's brother.

Since Cheri Lynn was born on her father's birthday, the party was a double celebration.

The guest of honor spent two and a half months this summer visiting her grandparents, Col. and Mrs. Harold Cloore in Seattle, Wash. Mrs. Cloore and a daughter, Mrs. Richard Ashby, accompanied the visitor back to Medford and spent a weekend here.

Eddie Brownell spent three and a half weeks visiting his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. F. I. Brownell at Santa Monica, Calif. during the summer.

St. Paul, Minn. — (U.P.) — William M. Strub figures his good health cost him 2776 hours in sick leave during his 46 years as a postal employee. Strub never missed an hour because of illness. He's now retired.
