HOW TO HAVE A PLACE TO HAVE A BABY

All six of our children, while an American woman of the 20th century, were born in a hospital. It is the only time they ever set a good rest... and even if, do not choose to argue with them about the need to rearrange their living habits.

A more compulsive factor of hospitalization for childbirth is the refusal of many doctors to attend confinement unless the expectant mother goes to the hospital. This behavior is motivated, I believe, by inherent waiting for thousands and thousands of women throughout the country, especially in backward cities where people without homes fit to have a baby in, have no alternative but to go to a 19th century hospital and submit to all the quaint "regulations" imposed upon the customers by old-fashioned lying-in institutions. You know the kind where newborn infants are crowded together in the show window here there is a much better chance that fatal infantile diarrhea or other infection may be transferred from one to the others by the ministrations of the nurse. The place for a newborn infant is in mother's arms or at her side, and the infant is happier and safer if mother takes care of her own.

While I think this woman was fortunate in having her babies in a nursing home rather than a hospital, still I wonder why she didn't have 'em in her own home. Home is the best and safest place to have a baby, and, please, Yankee Wiseacre, spare me that hackneyed argument about all the equipment for emergencies.

There are some feeble arguments against having your baby at home, even though your home is safer than any hospital can be. Some multiparae (hold it,

MOO-O-O-S AND MUSINGS

If the summer didn't seem to last long enough and you didn't get as much time off as you wanted, just remember that ancient Hindu proverb.

Half a loaf is better than no vacation at all.

TO AID ADOPTIONS

Hollywood - (U) - Actress Jane Russell said today she is turning over her salary for appearing on a Bob Hope TV show to an international adoption organization which she helped to start. After a trip to Europe five years ago, the actress helped organize the Women's Auxiliary International Fund. It assists American couples seeking to adopt foreign children.

that he has reason to feel that you will not be congenial and that your marriage has little chance for success.

No two people, of course, want exactly the same things in life. However, if they are to live together harmoniously and be happy, they must want much the same things. For example, if this young man wants success and realizes that success can be achieved only by hard work and personal sacrifices, you would be very unhappy if you wanted to have fun, a gay social life, and the constant companionship of your husband when he was not on the job.

Clash Over Money

Similarly, if money in the bank, available for any emergency, is important to him, while to you, having expensive material possessions is important, think how you would clash when the question of money arose.

This young man is right in
