

Hornbrook

Hornbrook—The Rev. Allen Sowards, former pastor here, and family, visited here Oct. 1 and at Ashland, Ore., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Breceda.

Sowards has been appointed a pastoral charge at Central Valley, Calif., where they recently moved from Yolo, Calif.

Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Funk visited last week end with friends and relatives in Canby and Altus, Calif.

The Hornbrook P.T.A. finished a membership drive in which the students took sides. The boys won a prize for getting the most members.

TWO IN ONE

Memphis, Tenn.—(U.P.)—Mrs. F. H. Bean Sr., became a grandma and great-grandma on the same day. Her son's wife had a girl; her granddaughter, a boy.

"Smart gal, my Susie!"

A lot of wives complain about housework, but not my Susie. She uses her head instead of her muscles. For example, some women spend a whole day just scrubbing and waxing wood floors. My Susie cleans and waxes them in one easy operation with Bruce Cleaning Wax. It takes only half the time and a lot less work. Yet our beautiful wood floors are the envy of her friends. My hat's off to Susie and her Bruce Cleaning Wax for making a tough job so easy. And I can't help but feel proud of both of them.

P.S. For lighter waxing on linoleum and wood, Susie uses Bruce Floor Cleaner.

As We Live

By ELIZABETH HURLOCK, PH.D.

Teenage Petting Problem Has Several Solutions
Many teenage girls are faced with the "petting problem" and do not know how to cope with it. That is true of the girls who wrote:

(Q) "We are two high school girls and were interested in what you said about parties for teenagers. However, at the end of your advice, you said the parents can handle the drinking problem but girls must learn to handle the petting problem for themselves. I wish you would give us some suggestions about this. I am sure there must be other girls in the same boat."
V. A. and J. G.

(A) There are no rules for handling the petting problem of today's teenagers, but I shall be glad to pass along some suggestions that seem to work with most girls of high school age. Perhaps you or your friends, after trying out these suggestions, can tell me how they work for you and add others which I, in turn, can pass on to other girls in the same boat. Here are my suggestions:

1. Arrange your dates so that you will not be in a place where petting will be easy. This means avoid car dates and dates where you go off my yourselves. If you don't want to pet, go to movies, dances, or parties where there are other people around.

2. Don't let boys get started in petting. If that is all they want when on a date, suggest that they take you home. They will probably never ask you for another date, but don't worry, they are not offering you the kind of date you want.
3. Avoid dates with older boys or boys who have the reputation of being "fast." Older boys may be more sophisticated than boys your own age, and they may know their way around better, but they are also likely to think that younger girls are easy marks for petting when they would hesitate to try with girls their own age. Also, any boy who has a reputation of being a petter is likely to try it out on any girl he dates.
4. Go on double or triple dates or even in larger groups. This eliminates opportunities to pet and makes it easier for a girl to handle the situation.

McCook, Neb.—(U.P.)—A McCook man was fined $100 for reckless driving following an accident, but officers had to admit he couldn't have picked a better place. The new car, badly wrecked, spun off the highway and rolled into a junkyard.

Kenya Residents Still Carrying Arms As Mau Mau War Rages

By ROBERT MUSEL
United Press Correspondent
Nairobi, Kenya — (U.P.)—My dinner date, Val Woodman, who used to lecture for the polio fund in New York, showed up with a pistol strapped to her waist and I wittily assured her Americans were not that dangerous.
"I know," she said, "but the Mau Mau are. My house is pretty isolated and they told me I would feel better with a gun and a watchdog."
Three years to the month that the Mau Mau terrorist society forced this crown colony into a state of emergency you will see residents, like Miss Woodman, strolling along the street with a pistol swinging from the hip. War Still On

You can still see an uncommon number of Army officers, armed guards, barbed wire. The war against Mau Mau is still going on with its daily communications of captures and casualties. And no one can predict when it will end for it is a struggle that may well move from the violent to the political stage and be just as dangerous to Britain withal.

Three years is a long time for a state of emergency and no one can blame people far from Africa for forgetting what it was all about at the beginning. But the casualty lists add up to staggering figures.

Dead—More than 20,000.
Wounded—A few hundred.
Imprisoned or detained—80,000.

The dead include 35 murdered Europeans, some of them were mutilated and tortured, 10,000 Mau Mau killed by the "Loyalist" side, thousands of Kikuyu murdered by Mau Mau executioners, 2000 native security police and loyalist Kikuyu fighters.

All those killed and only a few hundred wounded? War veterans will be surprised at this reversal of the usual casualty pattern. But the fighting in these forests is mostly of no-quarter.

The forest fighting is reminiscent of the American Indian wars. The Aberdare mountain thickets are almost impassable. A special agent told me the Kikuyu can "smell" foreigners animal like in the forests and ambush them or disappear as they desire.

The long struggle has drained Kenya's resources and the colony is tightening its belt for many months of military expenditure.

Mau Mau has been beaten down but it has not abandoned the fight. Guns and rifles are still being "lost" at a rate which can-

LATIN S.O.S.

Vermillion, S. D.—(U.P.)—Twenty thousand Latin teachers in the United States are not nearly enough to meet the demand, according to Dr. Grace L. Beede, head of Latin and Greek at the University of South Dakota. She said there are 140 Latin teacher vacancies in Indiana but only 10 Latin majors in the entire state. Miss Beede is collecting data on the status of Latin in South Dakota for the American Philological Association's committee on educational training.
