Survey of Possible Salvage Work Starts in Burned Areas

United States Forest Service employees have started surveying possible salvage of timber in areas burned over in Jackson and Klamath counties in the extensive Labor Day week forest fires.

Jack Wood, supervisor of Rogue River National Forest, said most salvage operations probably would be conducted in Klamath county along the Cascade divide and on the eastern foothills south of Crater Lake National Park.

Survey Teams Working
Survey teams have been studying possibilities of salvaging about 100 acres which burned over in the vicinity of Gardner peak on the divide, and another 20 to 30 acres about six miles west of Fort Klamath in the Cascade foothills.

Both areas contain timber which could be salvaged commercially, Wood said.

Wood also said there probably will be some salvage in a half-section of forest service land in the Sykes creek area north of Rogue River. The fire there burned over more than 6,000 acres, but only the half-section is forest service property.

The other major fire which damaged forest service property in the Labor Day week fires was the 270-acre blaze in the Middle Fork of the Rogue, but Wood said he doubted if there would be salvage from that property. The fire was mostly in second growth in an old burned area.

Most Trees Small
The fire was near the Imnaha guard station, and was one of about 45 reported in Rogue River National Forest the week of Sept. 5. Wood said the majority of the fires were limited to less than an acre, and no salvage operations are planned. The area burned over in the Middle Fork of the Rogue fire will be replanted with tree seedlings this fall, Wood said, as will other places where needed. He pointed out that many small burned over areas will re-seed themselves.

Meanwhile, in the Klamath National Forest in northern California, salvage operations already have started. The fire there burned over more than 80,000 acres north and west of Yreka.

Amateur Talent Show Scheduled By Medford DAV

An amateur talent show for children under 18 years of age will be held Nov. 9, at 8 p.m. in the Medford High school auditorium.

The show, which features contests with cash prizes, has been an annual event for the past five years. It is sponsored by the local chapter of Disabled American veterans.

The show generally includes 25 or 30 acts and includes added entertainment other than that offered by the qualified contestants.

The contestants are divided into two age groups, children under 10 and those between 10 and 18. A first, second and third prize is awarded to each group.

Admission price will be $1 for adults and 50 cents for children.

Entire proceeds from the project go into the rehabilitation fund of Jackson County number eight of the Disabled American veterans.

Morse Expects '56 Foe To Be Patterson

BY A. ROBERT SMITH
Mail Tribune Correspondent
Washington — Sen. Wayne Morris (D-Ore.) believes his Republican opponent next year will be Gov. Paul Patterson, regardless of the prospect that President Eisenhower will not seek a second term in the White House.

"I think he is already committed to run against me," Morse declared. "He's just waiting for a good time to announce it." Patterson has said he hasn't made up his mind yet whether he will take on Morse midway through his gubernatorial term, but that his decision won't be affected by what Eisenhower does.

Previously Morse had referred to the governor as the "No. 1 coattail rider" of the Republican party, implying that Patterson would run against him only if Eisenhower headed the ticket. Whom does the senator think will capture the GOP presidential nomination next August in San Francisco? Thomas E. Dewey, ex-governor of New York and two-time loser as a presidential candidate in 1944 against Franklin Roosevelt and in 1948 against Harry Truman.

"Dewey is the man those delegates will go for," Morse predicted. "They'll bring him back from a world tour next year, nominate him for a third try, and he'll get beat worse than he did before."

Morse said he thinks the absence of Eisenhower from the ticket will have "some" effect on the senatorial contest in Oregon, but that Republicans will play up the president as the "fallen hero" and as a "martyr" for his country who should be given a Republican successor.

"But that psychology won't work," said Morse, "because their candidate will be once removed. The king (meaning Eisenhower) is dead, politically. They just don't know it yet."

Nor does the senator believe any Republican candidate can be

Red Infiltration Found in Russia

Stayton — (U.P.) — Maybe the Russians really do have a sense of humor.

At least, the Soviet censors passed a post card from touring Rep. Patrick Hillings of California to Rep. Walter Norblad of Oregon which read: "Russia is an interesting country but there are signs of Communist infiltration."

elect by an appeal to the voters to continue the Eisenhower program, because, as he put it, "by next year there won't be any Eisenhower program."

As for his own newly adopted party, the senator feels certain that Adlai Stevenson is going all out for the Democratic presidential nomination and that he will get it. He thinks Sen. Estes Kefauver (D-Tenn.) may be Stevenson's running mate, or Gov. Frank Clement of the same state.

Morse was here in Washington, D. C., for a few days catching up on office work, making a batch of tape recordings for his regular radio broadcasts over a string of stations in Oregon, and sweating out the early prospect of becoming a grandfather. His daughter Nancy is expecting.

This weekend, Morse returns to Oregon for a packed schedule of speeches in the Medford area this coming week. By Christmas, he will have criss-crossed the state for engagements in most of the cities and towns of Oregon.

Morse's itinerary shows that most of his speaking invitations have come from Rotary clubs and other service groups, labor organizations, rural co-ops and local party groups.

Sandwiched between these state appearances, Morse has addresses slated at intervals in Cleveland, Ann Arbor, Salt Lake City and in New Jersey.
