Men of 2055 To Resemble Untidy Salami Unless They Change Television Habits

By WILLIAM EWALD
United Press Correspondent

New York—(U.P.)—TV watching in the opinions of some doctors surveyed by a manufacturer, may reduce the nation to a bundle of flabby monsters—fully equipped with squint, squat and stoop.

That's the warning from the home institute of Trav-Ler Corp., an outfit which manufactures electronic equipment.

According to the poll, the doctors look on TV with a dim eye, a condition that might possibly be caused by their own video squint. They see a future world in which each man will look a little like an untidy salami.

Basing their conclusions on information that the average viewer spends some five hours a day (and even more on week-ends) ogling his home screen, the majority of the sawbones decided that homo sapiens 2055 will be a unique, if that is the word, specimen.

Legs Will Be Shorter

He will be hunched-over, bleary-eyed and misshapen. His legs will be shorter, both of them atrophied from lack of use. One arm will be larger than the other from over-exercising the muscles in constant eating. And his waistline will bulge inelegantly.

Right now, said the doctors, the average American doesn't exactly rank as a physical charmer. The majority of citizens are guilty of sloppy posture. But the sloppiness is getting worse as the result of our slouching and lolling in front of TV sets.

This, they pointed out, puts an added strain on the heart, compresses the lungs and wrinkles the living room couch. And this, in turn, cuts down the circulation, makes breathing more difficult and results in upholstery problems.

Eye-strain, the doctors agreed, was another serious televiewing headache, to mix a metaphor or something. They recommended adequate light in the screening room and frequent glances away from the TV set to keep the orbicular jellies from curdling. Also eye baths.

Go-By To Goodies

As for the eating problem, the doctors advised viewers to give the go-by to goodies like popcorn, candy and such. Instead, they suggested radishes, cucumbers, celery and raw cauliflower. This, it might be pointed out, will not only cut down on the viewer's weight problems, but make it impossible to hear the commercials.

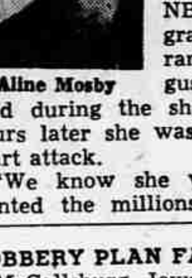
TV, the doctors recognized, has become as much a part of the American way of life as hot-dogs, baseball and same-day cleaners. But unless television addicts mend their ways, said the docs, the man of 2055 would be a mess.

As for the man of 1955, they've just about given up on him—he's too much of a mess already.

Around Hollywood

By ALINE MOSBY
United Press Correspondent

Hollywood — (U.P.)— Jimmy Durante, "because she would have been the first to say okay," Saturday presents the late Carmen Miranda's last performance.



Aline Mosby

The Brazilian Bombshell filmed the NBC-TV program with Durante in August. She faltered during the show. A few hours later she was dead of a heart attack.

"We know she would have wanted the millions of people who love her to see this show," Durante explained today. "And we got a telegram from her family tellin' us to use it."

Slips While Dancing

On the program, television viewers will see that Carmen slipped to one knee at the end of a strenuous mambo routine with Durante and Eddie Jackson.

She recovered quickly, stood up and laughed to Durante, "I can't catch my breath, you take my lines."

A close-up of the tragic moment originally had been shot. But when it showed pain on her face, a covering long-shot was substituted.

NBC's first thought had been to shelve the show. But viewers "sent in an enormous amount of mail," according to Bill Harmon, producer of the program.

"We weren't sure whether it was good taste to show the film," the producer said. "But after the letters came in, and her family requested the program be used, we had a conference with the sponsor and decided to run it. We held back the show until now so it wouldn't look as if we were capitalizing on anything.

Show Goes On

"Jimmy felt if anything happened to him he'd want people to see his last show. That's true of any performer."

Durante added a "prologue" in which he assures viewers Carmen's last curtain call was being shown at the request of her family. NBC gave her husband, Dave Sebastian, a print of the program. It will be shown for benefits in Brazil.

ROBBERY PLAN FAILED

McCallsburg, Iowa — (U.P.) — Charles Layton Cox, 22, told police today he had to cancel his plans to rob the Zearing, Ia., bank when he was arrested driving a stolen car near McCallsburg.
