Potpourri

If you want to see a simply gorgeous array of autumn foliage, drive to Prospect. Those who live up that way are saying that the foliage this fall is more beautiful than for a long time past, and it could very well be true. When Potpourri and Photographer Bob Dyer drove to Prospect last week, the maples seemed more golden, and the dogwood a more exquisite shade of red than ever before. Even the lowly road-side ferns are a golden brown which adds to the symphony of color.

Of course, there was a time when neither Potpourri or the driver could see the road, let alone the road-side foliage. We ran into a pounding hail and rain storm that practically stopped traffic, and for a time we aren't sure that the hailstones wouldn't come right through the top of the car.

The combination of the storm, the curves, and the windshield swipes on Bob's car made us positively dizzy. Did you ever swoop around curves with the car swipes going in opposite directions and out of rhythm? It's downright weird.

Propaganda in Russia just goes too far. It even extends to perfume, according to Miss Jean Kennedy and Mrs. Peter Lawford, daughters of the former ambassador to Russia who have just returned from a stay in Russia. Over here we have such interesting names as "White Shoulders," "Tabu," and "My Sin."

In Russia they have "The Kremlin," "Jubilee of the Soviet Army," and "Eighth of March" which is International Woman's Day. A rose by any other name might smell as sweet but we refuse to wear perfume named "Republican No. 5" or "Truman's Paradise."

The entire story by the two women makes very interesting reading. How five of them went into a new restaurant, ate lunch and then were confronted with a bill for $75. How milk sells for what would be $1 a quart here, and small children are cared for in nurseries from 7:30 a.m. until 7:30 p.m. every day in the week while their mothers do heavy manual labor.

We recommend that women read the article by the two travelers, carried elsewhere in today's issue.

"Isn't it awful how much talking we all do before we can decide anything or get any work done." This remark was from Mrs. Herbert Sampert, who has been buzzing around the valley helping with plans for the celebration of the 10th anniversary of the United Nations. We have news for Mrs. Sampert. She just doesn't know what a lot of talking can precede an event unless she has helped plan a wedding. Sometimes we have the awful feeling that the appointed day will arrive and nothing will have progressed beyond the talking point.

Right now the household is still more or less in a state of shock brought on by the return of the bride-to-be and all her possessions, and we're still in the unpacking and what-will-I-do-with-this stage. We keep starting little piles of this and that—some to be repacked, some to be thrown away, some to the rummage sale, etc., and then leaving them to do something else. But we still have hope.

Music lovers of the city are gathering their forces for the annual Civic Music drive next week. The drive director has arrived, and the yearly dinner for campaign workers will be tomorrow night.

The many opera fans in the valley often remark on how many of the stars in the San Francisco Opera company have appeared in concert here for Civic Music. Judge and Mrs. Rawles Moore who almost never miss a season, this year saw "Aida" and reported that the production was gorgeous. They spoke especially of Tozzi as the high priest, saying the singer was in remarkably good voice.

Mrs. Charles Lemery is another opera enthusiast who can be found in S. F. almost every October. This year she saw one of her favorites, Jan Peerce, who sang here a couple of seasons ago and who was honored at an after-concert supper given by Dr. and Mrs. Lemery. Mrs. Lemery also particularly enjoyed Claramae Turner, who sang here a few seasons ago.

The beautiful and talented Dorothy Wareskjold, who has appeared in concert twice here, also starred with the San Francisco company this season, and Robert Weede, Carl Palangi and Desire Ligeti are others who have appeared here in past years and who are with the San Francisco company this fall.

Other valley residents attending opera this year include Mrs. R. W. Gray, Dr. and Mrs. Earl Lawson and family, Dr. and Mrs. B. L. Lagerson, who also attended a dentist's convention while in the Bay city, Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Potter Jr., Mr. and Mrs. William Barker, Mrs. Richard D. Werner, Mrs. William G. Reed, Mrs. Ralph Matlack, the Otto Frohnmayers, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Jamison, the Robert Duncans and Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Hogan.

Actors who have been in the Oregon Shakespearean festival plays in Ashland also turn up from time to time in TV programs seen here. Eda Reiss Merin, who played Queen Gertrude in "Hamlet" for the 1954 season, was seen in one of the women's roles in "Lineup" Friday night, adding extra interest for local watchers. Last winter Paul Wexler, another former Shakespearean festival player, was in one of the "Lineup" casts. This TV show, produced in San Francisco is not only a favorite with coast television fans but was recently praised by UP's drama critic.

Bill Patton, festival secretary, broke into print in this week's Saturday Evening Post. Secretary Patton took the Post to task for a recent editorial which implied that the newly opened Shakespearean theater in Connecticut was the first of its kind in the nation, when the Ashland festival celebrated its 20th anniversary last summer.

Whenever Dr. Richard M. Steiner, Portland Unitarian pastor, speaks, what he says is apt to hit the headlines. Last week Dr. Steiner told delegates to the Oregon State Nurses' association that the American Nurses' association "should call for a conference with members of American Medical association for appointment of a joint commission to study the patient-nurse-doctor relationship." He added that nursing is in danger of becoming more of a trade than a profession unless some changes are made in the nurse's responsibilities in care of the patient.

According to reports of the speech, Dr. Steiner said that while the nurse would continue to have nothing to do with diagnosis or the prescription of therapy, the competent nurse should have more freedom to act in her best wisdom and judgment as far as the welfare of the patient is concerned in helping meet his physical and psychological needs. COOKIE VARIATION

New York—(U.P.)—Peanut butter cookies are a favorite with almost everyone. You can make an easy peanut butter cookie by following your favorite recipe for plain oatmeal cookies. In the making, substitute one-third cup of peanut butter for one-third cup of shortening and add one-half cup of chopped peanuts.

DRIED BEEF de LUXE

New York—(U.P.)—Creamed dried beef, an all-time favorite for economy meals, becomes a de luxe dish with the addition of fresh or canned mushrooms and a little sherry. If you use fresh mushrooms, saute them first. Serve the creamed beef on waffles or with stuffed, baked potatoes.
