Back Stairs: President's Birthday Gifts

By MERRIMAN SMITH
United Press White House Writer
Denver—(U.P.)—Backstairs at the Denver White House: President Eisenhower's taste in birthday gifts has undergone no change just because he's in the hospital. He much prefers things that can be used later on his farm at Gettysburg, Pa.

If Mr. Eisenhower had not suffered a heart attack, he probably would have returned to Washington shortly after his birthday. He's 65 today.

The public hears a lot about the nurses and corpsmen around the President. In fact, the White House has published the names of every person having anything to do with the case.

There are, however, eight unsung heroes at the Lowry Field White House offices. These are the Air Force enlisted men who, over and above their normal duties, have volunteered for the extra work involved in keeping the offices, the big conference room and the White House press room clean.

All of the young men are students at Lowry and their clean-up chores offer no excuse for missing classes. They attend to their technical studies, and sweep in their spare time.

The intrepid volunteers include two midwestern men—Airmen 3/C. Arthur W. Laakso, Owen, Wis., and Richard J. Ward, Three Rivers, Mich.

"Backstairs" keeps getting letters, mostly from men in the service or ex-GIs, asking whether the President is wearing GI pajamas or his own.

The answer again: His own.
