Initiation Held For Medford Man

Marcus L. McKenzie was initiated into Oddfellowship by Medford Lodge October 11. O. H. Bengtson gave the lodge an account of his recent trip to the Scandinavian countries, England, and other countries. He also reported that Rogue Valley peaches as well as orchardists are well known in foreign countries.

A letter from the Odd Fellows' home at Portland, expressing thanks for the recent shipment of peaches, with much praise for the fruit, was read to the lodge at the same meeting.

Card Party

Wenonah club will entertain a dessert card party at Redman hall Thursday, October 20 at 1 p.m.

Margaret: The Romance of a Princess

This is the second in a series of articles about Princess Margaret by Margaret Saville, who has covered the royal family of Britain for more than 20 years. She has written 22 books about them since the reign of George V. She covered the birth of Princess Margaret, the abdication of Edward VIII, the wedding of Queen Elizabeth and her coronation.

By MARGARET SAVILLE
United Press Correspondent

London — (U.P.)— The other young men who wooed Princess Margaret never really had much chance against Peter Townsend. She first met him when she was an impressionable 13, he a dashing and handsome RAF hero. For nine years they were together almost every day.

As enquirer to the royal family at Buckingham Palace, he was with her under gay and informal circumstances. In the privacy of the family parlor he sang to her piano playing, learned the rumba steps from her, played canasta, rode with her on the bridge paths of Windsor, went on picnics in the Scottish Highlands.

Not so with the other young men who escorted the vivacious little princess. There was Lord Ogilvie, the Marquis of Blandford, the Earl of Dalkeith, Mark Bonham Carter, Lord Hambleton, Billy Wallace.

Titled or wealthy young men, all of them, but seldom had they the opportunity to woo the princess under any but the stiffest and formal circumstances.

Come along on one of the dates Princess Margaret has had in the past two years while Townsend was in "exile" in Brussels.

The young man's first step is to telephone Clarence House—dial Whitehall 3141—and ask for the princess' lady-in-waiting. "I was wondering if her royal highness would care to join a small party I am giving," he says. Then he lists the date, the places to be visited and everyone else in the group. The lady-in-waiting notes it all down. Then the young man waits, a day or two, perhaps a week.

When the great day arrives, the young man, in freshly-pressed tuxedo and carnation, awaits the princess' arrival at the theater. He does not go after her. She comes in her own car, license "PM," with lady-in-waiting and Scotland Yard detective.

There are presentations and handshakes and curtsies. Comfortably settled, the host may enquire: "Ma'am, have we your permission to smoke?"

Permission is always granted. But Margaret always refused the cigarette offered to her. She takes her own from a case and lights up with the ivory holder the late Queen Mary gave her—"if you must smoke, at least keep your fingers unstained."

After the show, the host and another couple may be invited to ride in the royal limousine to a nightclub. The "400" and the "Cafe De Paris" are her favorites and the headwaiter knows her preference for the table on the righthand-side of the entrance.

For supper, Margaret may take some iced melon, consommé, smoked salmon and a single veal cutlet, one glass of champagne. Ever since she saw an unflattering newspaper picture of herself two years ago, she's watched her figure. She fancies plunging necklines and is shown to advantage in them.

Her first dance goes to the host, but after that she carefully rations herself among the men of the party. They report she is light, supple, rhythmic, relaxed and easy to dance with.

Sometime round 2 a.m., her royal highness says she'd better be going. No one has dared leave before.

A brief goodnight to the host and the momers, more curtsies and the princess is gone. No lingering on the doorstep like more ordinary couples. And, of course, no goodnight kiss.

It's all a bit chilly to male ardor but the chances are that it has suited Margaret very well during the past two years.

Central Point PTA Meets in Library; Name Committees

Central Point — Teachers of the Central Point schools were introduced at the first fall meeting of Central Point Parent-Teacher association, held in the library of Junior High school.

TB Director To Speak Here

The tuberculosis situation in Jackson county will be discussed by Ambrose S. Churchill, M.D., at a meeting of Jackson County Public Health association to be held Thursday, October 20 at 1:30 p.m. at St. Mark's Episcopal church.

Dr. Churchill is director of the tuberculosis section of Oregon State Board of Health. Dr. Churchill, who has been with the state board for almost two years, previously was with the bureau of tuberculosis control, San Diego Department of Public Health.

It is pointed out that five active cases of tuberculosis are found from the first 2,500 chest x-rays given since the Medford x-ray center was opened in local hospitals.

Anyone interested is invited to attend Thursday's meeting. Child care will be provided, and refreshments will be served.

Gold Hill Health Unit Works on Clinic Drive; Addresses 500 Letters

Gold Hill—Gold Hill Health unit held the last meeting at the home of Mrs. Lester Parker. Dessert was served, with Mrs. George Dorman and Mrs. Lloyd Dusenberry acting as co-hostesses.

After the business meeting, which was conducted by vice-president, Mrs. Lester Parker, the group spent the afternoon addressing some 500 letters to residents of the community for the annual October membership drive of the Southern Oregon Child Guidance clinic.

Mrs. Paul Malloy, who will represent the Gold Hill unit of the bi-monthly meeting, announced that the meeting would be held at the Episcopal church in Medford Thursday, October 20, starting at 1 p.m.

The unit plans to take part in the annual community teachers' party to be held at the IOOF hall October 27 at 8 p.m. This will be a costume party and unmasking for prizes will be at 9 p.m. Each lady, with the exception of the guests, is to take a pie. Mrs. Kenneth Fluck was appointed to kitchen duty.

Guests were Mrs. Gerald Whalley, Mrs. Earl Remsen and Mrs. S. N. Saville.

Next meeting will be November 1st at the home of Mrs. Norman Gail, with Mrs. Harry Quinn and Mrs. Ralph E. McLaughlin as co-hostesses.

Dinner Planned By Kappa Deltas

Southern Oregon Kappa Delta Alumnae association has planned a Founders' day dinner Wednesday, October 19, at the home of Mrs. Don Geren, Eagle Point. A potluck meal will be served and any Kappa Delta not contacted and interested in attending the event may call Mrs. Ernest James, telephone 3-1222 for further information.

MEDFORD (OREGON) MAIL TRIBUNE—THREE

Rogue River Club To Aid Project Of Civic Group

Rogue River — Members of Laurel Garden club decided at the last meeting to work with the Civic club on their project to beautify the Woodville cemetery. Mrs. Jerusha Moore was appointed chairman to represent the garden club.

The meeting was held October 5 in the Civic club rooms. The hostesses, Mesdames Charles Babcock, Walter Kasworm and Henry Bonney, served dessert, which was followed by the business meeting. Mrs. Charles Babcock, the president, presided.

Flowers of the day were dahlias raised from seed, fall crocus, and michaelmas daisies from the garden of Mrs. William White, conservation chairman. Mrs. Benney gave a few pointers on growing and caring for chrysanthemums. An exchange of bulbs and plants was held.

Flowers were sent to Mrs. Sophia Thiesen, who was reported ill, and a get-well card was sent Mrs. Andrew Guffin. Mrs. Maud Parsons as a guest. The next meeting will be November 2 at the home of Mrs. Iza Forsyth with Mrs. Homer Classick as co-hostess.

Leaves

Mrs. O. L. Smith, Dallas, Tex., recently left for her home after spending three weeks in Oregon and Washington with relatives. She visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Coghill, 415 J street, for a week and then accompanied them north to spend a week with the Coghill's son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Coghill, Whidby Island, Washington.

The younger Mr. Coghill is stationed on Whidby Island with the United States Air Force and is an airman second class in the Navy air control arm.
