Pre-Geneva Pressure Being Applied by Top Reds at U.N. Session

United Nations, N.Y.—(U.P.)—The Soviet Union appeared Saturday to be applying pre-Geneva conference pressure on the West by calling for a long drawn out disarmament debate in the United Nations while making plans to blame the West if it fails.

The most logical interpretation observers could put on Friday's daylong performance by Soviet Delegate Arkady A. Sobolev in the UN disarmament Commission was that it was a "pre-Geneva" maneuver designed to build up pressure on the Western Powers.

Sobolev insisted that the 12-nation commission should immediately prepare a report on the record of the secret meetings of its subcommittee of the five major atomic powers. The record, 2,440 pages long, was published for the first time only three hours before the commission met.

Tulip and narcissus bulbs are planted in the fall and bloom in the spring. They are winter hardy and are not damaged by cold winter temperatures.

Gladiolus corms on the other hand are planted in the spring for summer and fall blossoms and are tender to winter cold. A few hours exposure to a 29 degree temperature will kill gladiolus corms. This does not mean a 29 degree temperature but the corm itself must be chilled to the temperature. As the corms are several inches in the ground they have considerable protection against winter cold and in mild winters will come through with no injury. In order to be safe it is best to dig the gladiolus corms now and store them for the winter.

Should Be Dried In order to be satisfactorily stored the corms should be thoroughly dried without exposing them to the direct sunshine. This will take about three weeks at ordinary room temperature. As soon as the corms are dug the tops should be removed and burned. This will destroy insects and diseases that may otherwise overwinter in the tops.

After the corms have been dried place them in a paper bag and add a tablespoon of DDT powder. Shake so that each of the corms is coated with DDT. Fold the top of the bag and store the DDT covered corms for the winter. This will kill any thrips that may be on the corms. An ideal storage temperature would be about 45 degrees but be sure the corms are not exposed to below-freezing temperatures.

New School Already In Need of Addition

Portland — (U.P.) — Voters in Portland's brand-new David Douglas high school district have voted 323 to 42 in favor of a $325,000 bond issue for construction of 15 new classrooms, and band and choir room. The new school opened for the first time last month.

Superintendent Floyd Light said bids would be called in two months and that the added rooms should be available by next September.

tions should not debate disarmament at the same time as the Big Four foreign ministers are debating it at their Geneva meeting. The consensus was that the general assembly could profit from the Big Four's views.

Sobolev said that there "is a definite possibility of agreement on the basic questions of disarmament" and charged that Harold E. Stassen, President Eisenhower's principal aide on disarmament questions, had cast "general doubt" on the possibility of an accord in the five-nation subcommittee.

U. S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., retorted that the Americans want a "real debate" on disarmament here in the United Nations but would not stand for any "stampeding" of the UN membership by the Russians.

Performance Thought Odd The Friday performance was long, and in the opinion of many delegates, odd. It seemed to add up to these probabilities:

1. Russia wants to put the West, by blaming it for the lack of agreement in the secret arms talks, in a bad propaganda light. This probably is to offset the propaganda disadvantage the Soviet Union is likely to suffer if, as is expected, it rejects at Geneva the West's package deal on German unification.

2. The Russians are not anticipating any real progress on disarmament in the Big Four meeting and want it on the record that the West refused to debate arms reduction here at this time.

3. The Kremlin is pointing toward a major propaganda effort when the Assembly gets around to its disarmament debate, now likely late in November, and Sobolev has laid the groundwork for a phony charge that the West is responsible if arms talks break down.

Legislators Meet For Boundary Talks

Seattle — (U.P.) — Committees representing the Washington and Oregon legislators met here in an effort to determine the boundary line between the two states.

Although the Columbia river is the dividing line, a more exact mark is necessary whenever a dam or bridge spans the river. This is necessary because accidents during construction must be determined as to which state is responsible under the states' respective workmen's compensation laws, and the tax questions involved.

The two committees were created at recent sessions of the two Legislators.

Stevenson Says 90 Per Cent of Parity Required by Farmers

Des Moines — (U.P.) — Adlai E. Stevenson says falling farm income has made it "necessary" to set price supports at 90 per cent of parity on basic crops.

The 1952 Democratic presidential candidate sent a statement of his farm views to Midwest party leaders winding up a two-day conference here Saturday.

Stevenson said 90 per cent of parity, the former level of price supports under Democratic administrations, "is certainly not unfair or too high."

Support Not Enough But, he cautioned, "Such price supports do not by themselves constitute a complete farm program."

Reaffirming remarks he made in a recent speech at Green Bay, Wis., Stevenson said that for some commodities, especially perishables, direct production payments may be the answer to surpluses and unbalanced production.

A constructive farm program, he said, should include "incentive" for the transfer of unneeded grain acreage to conservation uses, and shifts from greater livestock and less cereal production.

"It means using our abundance as an instrument of our foreign policy abroad and a weapon against hunger at home," he said.

Party Ideas Used Stevenson's statement appeared to align him more firmly with the traditional Democratic concept of rigid high supports.

In his Green Bay speech, Stevenson expressed doubt that 90 per cent parity supports were "good enough" to solve problems and called for experimental-

Medford Safety Conference Set

Salem — (U.P.) — Four regional industrial safety conferences will be held in Oregon this year, the State Accident Prevention division said Saturday.

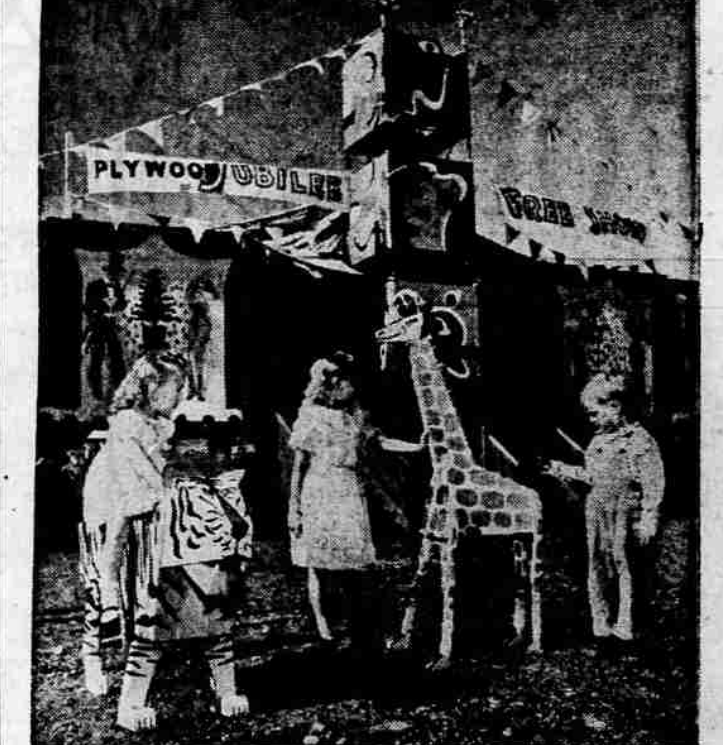

The conferences will be in Coquille Nov. 5, Pendleton Nov. 19, Springfield Dec. 3 and Medford Dec. 10. Regional industrial safety meetings were held earlier in Dallas and Roseburg and a special industries conference is planned for Portland later in the year.

The conferences replace the state-wide governor's conference this year and are designed for discussion of regional safety problems by employers and employees of the area. They are sponsored by a local safety committee and the accident prevention division.
