

Salvation Army Aids Unfortunate; Assisted by UMC

(Editor's note: This is another in a series of brief articles dealing with the agencies which are benefitted from contributions to the United Methodist Crusade. The material is furnished by the agencies themselves.)

The helping hand extended to the unfortunate by the Salvation Army is made possible through contributions to the United Methodist Crusade.

Aid is refused to no one and the Salvation Army is prepared for any emergency. The red shield has become a symbol of help wherever it is seen. It was such a symbol to the mother and father with nine children who turned to it when they had run out of funds on the last of their journey to California. The Salvation Army provided them with food, shelter and fuel for the car. It was such a symbol to the family traveling toward Medford who could not reach the city limits in time for the mother to give birth to her child. The Salvation Army gave complete care to the entire family for two weeks.

The problems are as varied as humanity and extend even into supervision and distribution of money for those families needing financial guidance.

The United Methodist Crusade supports this work.

Walls Dismissal Motion Turned Down

Portland—(U.P.)—U. S. District Judge Gus J. Solomon yesterday denied a defense motion for dismissal of an indictment charging Wilbur Walls, 61, Portland, of illegal possession of gold bricks valued at $5000.

Attorney Donald Walter petitioned for dismissal on the ground that the trial had been delayed for too long a time. Walls was indicted more than a year ago.

Judge Solomon, in issuing the denial, said the delay was caused by the slaying of Walls' former attorney, Oliver Kermit Smith, last April. Walls' trial date is Nov. 8.

Former Medford cab driver Woodrow Wilson Atwood, 42, was given three years probation after pleading guilty to a similar charge. Stephen Crippen, Medford, included in the same indictment, was acquitted by a federal court jury. Walls formerly resided in Ashland.

SENATORS SILENT—Democratic Senators John L. McClellan, Ark. (right), and John Stennis, Miss. (center), returned to Washington aboard regularly scheduled Military Transport Service plane and said tartly the Defense Department will have to explain statements that a special plush plane had been sent at their request to Europe to pick them up.

Defense Department Apologizes To Solons Over Plane Request

Washington—(U.P.)—Two Democratic senators today accepted the Defense Department's apology for erroneously reporting that they requested special push air transportation from Europe.

Sens. John L. McClellan (D-Ark.) and John G. Stennis (D-Miss.), said in separate statements, that, barring further developments, the highly publicized incident is closed.

Public Apology
Last night the department publicly apologized for asserting that the senators requested a special plane to fly them home from Spain at a cost of $10,000.

At the same time the Air Force announced it was Sen. Dennis Chavez (D-NM), the third senator involved in the controversy.

"A review of this matter," the department said, "has established the fact that Sens. McClellan and Stennis did not request, nor were they made aware that the Air Force planned to fly special mission aircraft to Madrid for their return."

"It is regretted that the incident caused embarrassment to the senators," the statement said. Requested by Escort

The department subsequently said it checked with Col. Ralph J. Watson, military escort officer for the senatorial group. According to the department, it was Watson who requested the special planes, apparently without consulting the senators themselves.

cer for the senatorial group. A department's apology, commented that "it was certainly the least they should have done to straighten it out."

Stennis said, "I was sure that they would make such a statement when they got the facts. We were shocked and greatly surprised. I appreciate their statement after developing the full details."

On The Side

(Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

The sale of wives is still in effect in Nigeria. Recently there have been complaints from bachelors about the high cost of wives there. They said they couldn't get enough money in hand to buy a wife. So now wives are being sold on the installment plan. The total price for a Nigerian wife is about $77. I don't know what the down payment is.

Culinary Crime

On a restaurant menu I saw listed "cream scallops." Sounds like a horrible dish. The man who first thought it up should be styled a culinary criminal. Only way to serve scallops properly is fried and plain.

Get It Right

Does the Bible condemn the wearing of slacks by women? It is repeatedly said by persons who should know better that such is the case. In attempting to prove their contention they quote Deuteronomy 22:5—"The woman shall not wear that which pertaineth unto a man." The slacks worn by women are especially made for women. They are distinctly female attire. So, sir, if your wife wears slacks assure her it is not a sin. Incidentally, I have been accused of being against women wearing slacks. That's not so. I have frequently said that women having figures like Katharine Hepburn should wear slacks. At the proper times and places, of course.

Asking

Queries from clients. Q. The British national game is soccer. I say that an American team once beat Britain's best soccer team. Right? A. Quite right, sir. In 1950, in the Soccer World Series games, held at Bilo Horizonte, Brazil, an American soccer team gave the British team a bad beating. . . . Q. I say that no son, on reaching full growth, is ever shorter than his mother. Do you dispute this? Can you name a man who is shorter than his mother? Want to bet a stogie? A. I think Jack Westrope, the jockey, is shorter than his mother.

Over There

United States soldiers stationed in Great Britain continue to express great admiration for English girls and to frankly say they prefer them as companions and wives to American girls. One G. I. Joe recently said with much enthusiasm: "The English girls are the best kissers. They hang onto each kiss as if it was their first or was going to be their last."

Business Woman

The shrewdest business woman of all times. So I note Hetty Green referred to. That's nonsense. There have been many greater business women than she was. In fact, I could name quite a few now living who are much smarter in handling business deals than Hetty was. The women I have in mind started with nothing but their ability. Hetty Green's father left her $6,000,000. An aunt left her the income of a million dollars. Hetty also married a millionaire. No wonder she was in possession of so much coin of the realm. She knew how to hold on to a dollar, but was no miracle woman of the business world.

Ragtime

Among the theatrical productions scheduled for presentation on Broadway in the near future are two based on the history of jazz. Somebody should also do a musical on the history of ragtime. They could start off with an extremely picturesque background. That of the Maple Leaf Club in Sedalia, Mo. That was the place which inspired Scott Joplin to write that perennial hit tune titled "The Maple Leaf Rag."

Correction

"You say Los Angeles carpenters earn $116 a week," writes a feminine reader. "That is wrong. My daddy is a carpenter in Los Angeles and he only earns $114.40 a week. Send me a stogie carefully wrapped by return air mail and I will give it to my Daddy."

Two Air Force Men Die in Plane Crash

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.—(U.P.) Two Air Force officers were killed near here in the remote Upper Peninsula yesterday when their F89 Scorpion jet crashed in flames during a blinding snowstorm.

Officials at Kinross Air Force Base identified the victims as 1st Lt. Francis J. Monohen of Aberdeen, Wash., and 2nd Lt. Wayne Riley of Oakdale, Pa. An Air Force spokesman said the plane had taken off from the field on a routine training flight.

State police at the scene said the two crew members had radioed they were in trouble and that they planned to parachute from the crippled plane. Troopers said the two victims apparently were unable to jump and tried to crash-land in a desolate field.
