

KEEPING Apace WITH THE TIMES, the Diablo Drug Store in Walnut Creek features an "earthquake sale" only a few hours after sharp temblor rocked the San Francisco Bay region Sunday night. Behind the store's quake-shattered display window (left), aisles were strewn with merchandise that had been shaken from the shelves. (International)

'Dark Horse' Seen as Possible Democratic Presidential Nominee

Washington — (U.P.) — Sen. John C. Stennis (D-Miss.), said today he thinks there is a good chance that a "dark horse" may win the Democratic presidential nomination next year.

This comment to a reporter reflected a belief among many Democrats, particularly in the South, that the nomination may well go to someone other than the three now considered the strongest candidates.

These three are Adlai E. Stevenson, 1952 nominee, Gov. Averell Harriman of New York and Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee.

Sen. Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.), Mr. Southern Democrat in the Senate, suggested to reporters Tuesday that Gov. Frank J. Lausche of Ohio was one "dark horse" possibility. He denied he was launching a boom for Lausche or that he was ready yet to throw his support to any candidate.

Middle of Road

Russell did say that Lausche is regarded in the South as a "middle of the road" whereas other candidates are viewed as "a little far to the left." He also said he thinks Lausche would be a "very strong candidate" if nominated.

"Naturally, I would prefer a middle of the road candidate," he said.

Stennis declined to comment on Lausche or other potential Democratic standard bearers but said he believes "that there is a good chance for a dark horse."

Russell reiterated his belief that Stevenson now looks like the most likely winner of the Democratic nomination. He also repeated that he has no intention of seeking the nomination himself as he did in 1952, when he was backed by almost solid support from the South.

Some Southern senators, and some Democrats outside of the south, would like to support Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson if he is not ruled out because of his health. Johnson suffered a heart attack July 2.

Warren Candidacy Seen

Russell said he knew nothing of Mr. Eisenhower's intentions either but that he has long believed that the Republicans would nominate Chief Justice Earl Warren if the President does not seek a second term.

HUNGER STRIKE

Fond Du Lac, Wis. — (U.P.) — Lee Norman, 50, who has been staging a hunger strike at Green Lake county jail since Sunday, explained he was doing it because he is "disgusted with Green Lake county."

al Chairman Paul M. Butler accused the Republican party of being the first major political group ever to "seek votes by a public statement of its anti-labor bias."

Butler referred to reports that Republicans were circulating a document accusing labor leaders of using violence, coercion and massive "flush funds" in an attempt to control the 1956 election.

The document was said to have been prepared by Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.), chairman of the GOP Senatorial Campaign committee.

A Nichol's Worth of ... Comment On This and That

By HARMAN W. NICHOLS
United Press Feature Writer

Washington — (U.P.) — What's new in Washington:

Sinclair Weeks, the secretary of Commerce, is the walking member of Ike's cabinet.

He lives in the Georgetown area of Washington, a good three miles from his office, and generally walks it, at least one way. The other day he was to do a TV show on safety. The studio people were pacing and waiting.

Weeks showed up about two minutes before the show was to go on. "It was quite a walk," the secretary said.

Somebody started a rumor that the government has a bunch of surplus jeeps—all carted and ready to sell for $25 apiece.

There's nothing to it, folks. The Army Surplus Division is getting tired of writing letters to people from all over the country. The come-on to the rumor was that the Army would buy the jeeps back for $50 within five years, "in case of emergency." That's a lie, too. Fact is, the only Army jeeps for sale are those that can't be economically repaired—and then only to the highest bidder.

Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, chief of staff of the Army, the other day asked a bunch of young paratrooper recruits why they chose that rugged branch of the service. One kid said he didn't care too much about jumping out of airplanes, but he liked to be around men who like to jump out of airplanes. The general, who commanded the famous 82nd Airborne Division in World War II, nodded in understanding. "That makes two of us, soldier," he said.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation reported in its news letter:

"Our shortage of soft drink bottles, principally at the sixth floor machine, now amounts to more than 12 cases. Please check your drawers and filing cabinets."

Civilian pilots are getting older. The Civilian Aeronautics Administration reports that right now more than 75,000 fliers are over 40, and the largest percentage of pilots is between 30 and 39. That compares with figures from 1946 when the 20 to 29 age group was largest. The CAA figures that a lot of wheels now fly their own small planes—and a lot of wheels are old—over 40, that is.

The Pentagon reports that Pfc. Francis I. Steinberg, of Staten Island, N. Y., was unpacking some wet-cell batteries when he found a little note saying "good luck."

The handwriting looked familiar, so he took it back to his barracks and compared the note to his girl friend's handwriting. It matched. She happens to work in a plant about 10 blocks from his house back home. The girl, Pat Stern, owned up to the note and said she put a "good luck" note in all of the packages she sent to the 32nd Infantry, 7th Division.

The Hawthorne, N. J., drum and bugle corps had a lot of tough luck at the American Legion's convention in Miami. During the contest it rained like everything and the drums weren't thumpable. The New Jersey boys finished fourth. The uniforms were so soaked the boys couldn't march the next day. On the way home, the truck lugging the uniforms caught fire in Neptune, Ga. A loss of $7,500 in duds. The drummers and horn tooters managed to get home with their trophy, which came from a ribbon counter.

Hungry Boys Solve Pie Freezing Problem

New Brunswick, N. J. — (U.P.) — When Dr. Walter A. MacLinn, a food specialist and professor at Rutgers University, was at odds with food editors on whether to freeze pies before or after baking, he knew where to go for a panel of experts.

What better tasting jury than 10 hungry boys, all less than 10 years old?

The 75 editors, representing newspapers, magazines and radio stations on the eastern seaboard, had contended after sampling some of Dr. MacLinn's pies—mostly apple—that the ones frozen before baking tasted best.

But Dr. MacLinn was skeptical. So he rounded up the boys and assembled them in Buechle Park.

"The youngsters went along professor reported. "They couldn't detect any difference in flavor between the 'before' and the 'after' frozen pies. And what's more, they thought I was a good cook."

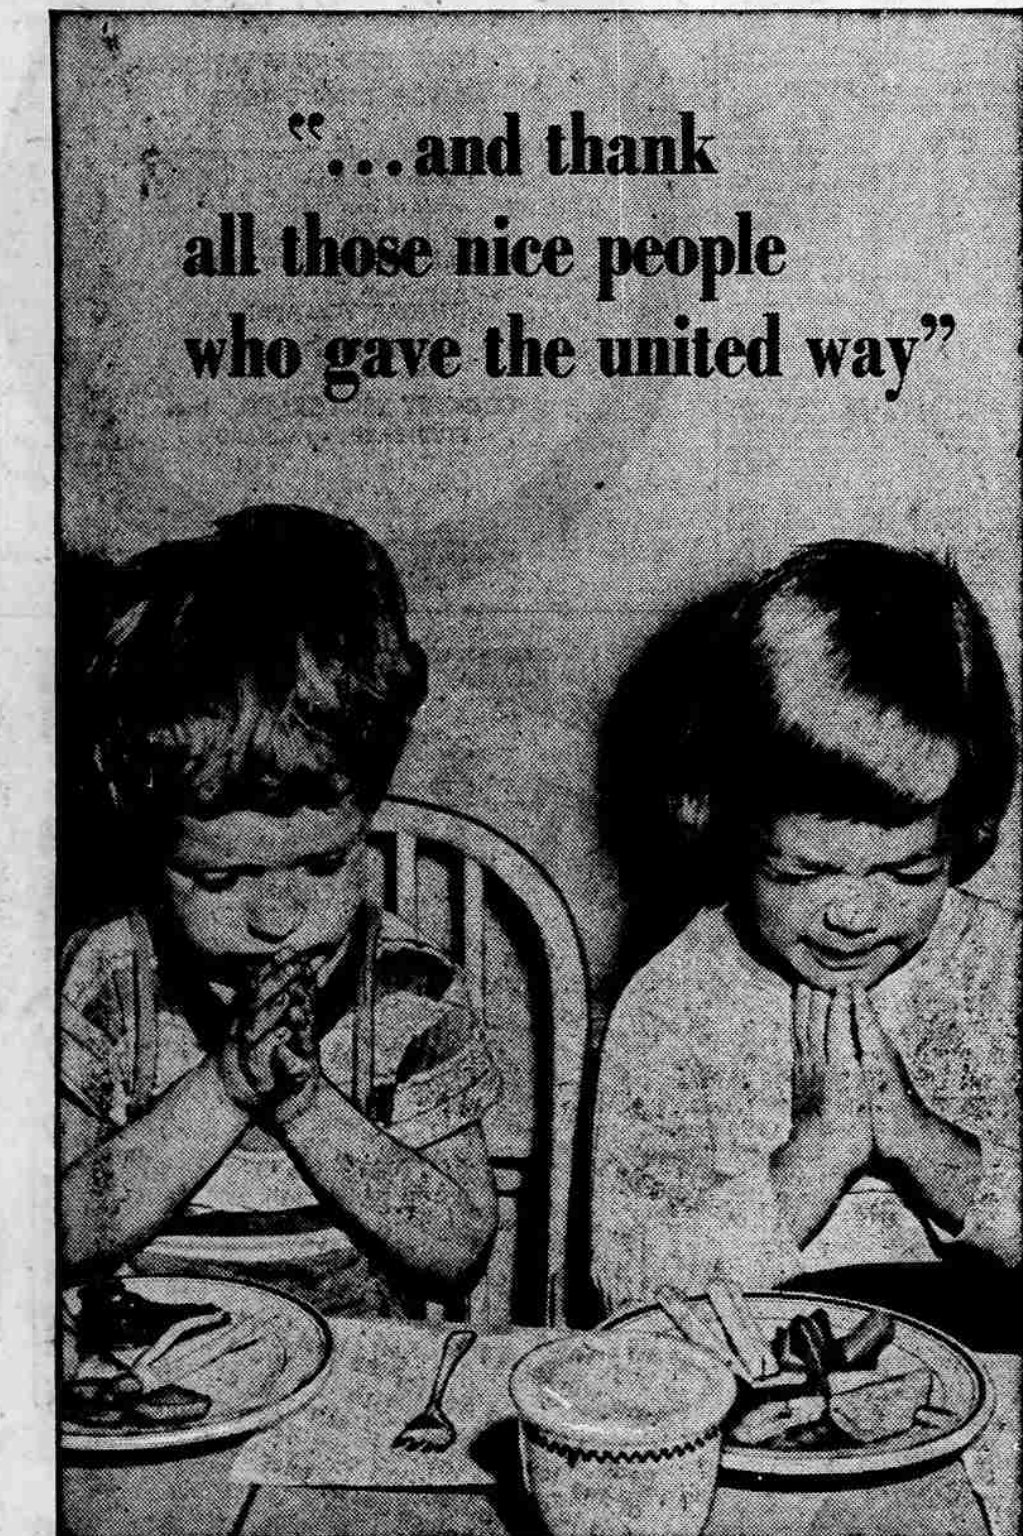

Gary, Ind. — (U.P.) — Paul Burk, whose car was returned three days ago after being stolen from a parking lot, reported Tuesday that it had been stolen again—from the same parking lot.

DROP IN STOCK — Bill Hallisey of the Cannery Sales Stores in Walnut Creek, Calif., raises arms in disgust as he views half of his stock of cans and bottles spilled on floor after earthquake shook this community. At least every other store here had its windows broken.

Courtroom Approved By Federal Judges

Portland — (U.P.) — Plans for a new courtroom in the U.S. courthouse here were approved yesterday by Oregon's three federal judges. But the judges said the estimated $100,000 needed for the job is not available yet and a request for air conditioning has been turned down.
