Niagara To Disappear Soon Geologists Say

Niagara Falls, N.Y.—(U.P.)—Niagara Falls will be nothing more than a long series of rapids in a "short time" say the geologists, so maybe you should hurry up and get a look at the mighty cascade of foaming water before it's gone.

Executive Secretary A. M. Anderson of the Niagara Frontier State Parks Commission agreed with the predictions of the geologists recently but was not too concerned about the disappearance of the falls.

"If you're talking about a thousand years or so from now, that is probably true," Anderson commented. "Geologically, a thousand years is a short time." The geologists base their predictions on the fact that the falls are receding to a strata of soft rock a few hundred yards up stream. When the brink of the falls reaches the soft rock it will cut through and form a steep rapids.

Road Changes Scene of Hemingway Tales

Horton Bay, Mich.—(U.P.)—Not to Ernest Hemingway: The elms are gone, the smithy, too.

It was in this little northern Michigan community that the famous novelist, then an unknown, convalesced from wounds suffered as an ambulance driver in World War I. He rested beneath the rows of stately elms and gathered material for his stories on northern Michigan in Dolworth's blacksmith shop.

Now, both the elms and the blacksmith shop are gone, victims of a county road-widening project. Local authorities decided the elms presented a traffic hazard and a task force of construction workers cut them down.

The new road will run across the site where Dilworth's smithy stood. Those of the town's 75 inhabitants who remember Hemingway were saddened, as they watched the big trees fall. But to others this was just another sign of progress.

Haynes Boy Still in Critical Condition

Eleven-year-old Joe Willie Haynes is still in critical condition at Sacred Heart hospital, attendants said this morning. The boy "spent a good night" last night, they said.

The child was injured about two weeks ago in an automobile accident on Highway 99 near the Gold Hill overpass. He was helping push the family car, which had stalled, when another vehicle came upon the scene in the early morning darkness.

The driver of the second car swerved, but was unable to avoid hitting the boy. The family was en route to their home at Corcoran, Calif., when the accident occurred.

Dead line Sunday Classified is at noon Saturday; 10 a.m. Monday for Monday; other days 5:30 previous day.
