

ADD TO YOUR COLLECTION OF SAUERKRAUT SPECIALTIES

It's Kraut, Pork 'n' Apple Dinner Season time again. Time to dig out your favorite recipes for the trio and time to try out new ones on the family. There are so many really good dishes possible with these plentiful go-togethers that no one should be at a loss for a good recipe that will have everyone clamoring for seconds.

You probably have your own special recipe for kraut and pork chops. A wonderful old stand-by we hold in esteem consists of Kraut and Pork Chops with Candied Apple Rings. We think you might want to try it. We particularly like the flavor the pork drippings give the sauerkraut. After the pork chops are browned, the kraut is added along with chopped onion and seasonings, and they are cooked together until the chops are tender. The apple rings are candied with a simple sirup made with red cinnamon candies and add a bright note to the platter when arranged alternately with the pork chops.

We like to complete this dinner with individual salads of canned California white asparagus garnished with green-pepper strips for texture and color interest and served with a simple dressing.

Kraut and Pork Chops with Candied Apple Rings (Makes 4 servings)

4 loin pork chops
1 No. 2 can sauerkraut, drained
1/4 cup finely chopped onion
1 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
1/4 teaspoon sage
1/4 cup red cinnamon candies
1/4 cup boiling water
2 medium-sized apples, cored and sliced
2 tablespoons sugar

Cook chops until lightly browned, about 20 to 30 minutes. Drain, reserving 1/4 cup drippings. Combine drippings, kraut, onion, salt, pepper and sage. Cook, covered with chops over low heat 1 hour or until chops are tender.

Meanwhile, dissolve candies in water. Add apples and boil slowly until apples are tender. Remove apples and add sugar to sirup. Boil 3 minutes; pour over apples. Serve with chops and kraut.

On The Side

(Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

By E. V. Durling

Did I ever tell you how I happened to become interested in astrology? If I did, you can't stop me. Happened to glance over an article on stargazing which said in part, "Men born under Leo don't like rain. They hate work but will work if they have to." I was born under Leo. I don't like rain. I get the blues when it rains. It also causes muddy tracks. As for work, I have always hated it. Yet I have worked hard all my life because I have had to. So I figured perhaps the stargazers had something. I began to check on them. Incidentally, a feminine subscriber, born under Capricorn, recently wrote me, "You are a typical Leo. Unbearably stubborn and so conceited. Always claiming to know everything." That is very unjust. I am not stubborn, just firm. I have never claimed to know everything. Only nearly everything.

Passing By

Jo Ann Manners. One of this country's most glamorous grandmas. Jo Ann, who confesses she is 50, is engaged in a most unusual occupation for a grandparent. She is a strip tease dancer. . . . Rudolf Bing. Top man of the Metropolitan Opera. He is the highest paid musical director in the world. The Metropolitan lost half a million dollars last season. When Gatti-Casazza was general manager of the Met, the outfit frequently broke even. But, of course in those days the Metropolitan had Caruso, Farrar, Alda, Scotti, Jeritza and artists like that.

Fashion Note

"Sallie Lane of Beverly Hills, Calif.," is the sign on a dress shop on Madison Avenue, Manhattan. This seems to indicate Beverly Hills is rated a style center like Paris, New York, Rome, etc. Anyway, a smaller sign on the shop signed in handwriting by Sallie Lane read, "Out to lunch. If urgent, am across the street at Hamburger Heaven."

Asking

Queries from clients. Q. You said Orville Harrold appeared in a burlesque show called "Wine, Women and Song" before he sang at the Metropolitan Opera. I can find no mention of this in any theatrical reference books. How about it? A. Orville Harrold appeared in a burlesque show titled "Wine, Women and Song" at the Circle Theater, Manhattan. Alexander Carr, Bonita and Lew Hearn were in the same show.

The Winner

The husband said there was a song titled "When Polly Walks Through the Hollyhocks With Me." The wife said there never was such a song. The argument was referred to this department for a decision. Ben Bernie and his Hotel Roosevelt orchestra made a Brunswick recording of "When Polly Walks Through the Hollyhocks" some years ago. So the husband wins the argument. Congratulations, sir.

Get It Right

What with the sharpshooters I have checking on me, it is a wonder I have a stogie left to my name. A New Yorker writes, "You say John R. Voorhis lived in the same house on Greenwich Street, Manhattan, for 101 years. That's wrong. He only lived there 100 years. He was born in Prompton Lakes, N.J., and was brought to the house in Greenwich Street, New York, when one year old."

Please Note

Am asked who starred in the farce titled "Mrs. Black Is Back." It was Mary Irwin. You have to be a young old timer to remember May. Her last words were most touching. Just before she passed on, May said to her maid, "You know that red dress the dressmaker just made for me?" The maid said she did. "Bury me in it," said May.

TOO MUCH—Clarence Miles (above), the attorney who led the successful campaign to bring major league baseball back to Baltimore, resigned as president of the Orioles. He said his law practice suffered as a result of his sports activities.
