Sexy Costumes For Opera Said 'New Realism'

By ELIZABETH TOOMEY United Press Correspondent

New York — (U.P.) — Rise Stevens described her costume for the opening night of the Metropolitan Opera season, smiled at the raised eyebrows, and admitted:

"Singing at the Met was never like this in the old days."

The red-haired soprano, who introduced a lively, lowdown Carmen to Met audiences three years ago, said she will wear "a gold lace dress covered with black tulle with a bodice that starts under the bosom" as Giuletta in "Tales of Hoffmann" next Monday night.

"Under, did you say?" a listener queried. "Under," said Miss Stevens, with a pleased grin. "It is the sexiest costume in the performance. Actually the bosom is covered with flesh-colored chiffon and a few strategically-placed flowers, but the effect is startling."

The costume is part of the new realism that's come into classic opera, she explained.

"Show business is show business," the Bronx-born singer said matter-of-factly. "The Met has had to compete with Broadway and television."

As one of the three highest paid singers at the Met, Miss Stevens feels no need to compete with night club entertainers or to accept any of the fabulous-sounding offers that lure other opera singers to Las Vegas.

"I don't think it is interesting enough," she said, shrugging off both the two-a-night club routine and the five-figure weekly salary.

Miss Stevens was interviewed in her Manhattan duplex apartment, where she and her husband, Walter Surovy, and their 11-year-old son, Nicholas, live when they are not in their Westhampton, Long Island, home.

"I'll do 30 or 40 concerts this year and sing 40 times at the Met," Miss Stevens said. "And I have several television shows to do, so why should I appear in a night club or do a Broadway show? I can act and sing at the Met and not be hampered with singing the same part eight times a week as I'd have to on Broadway, or doing two shows a night in smoky night-clubs."

Griffin Creek Club Shown Two Films

Griffin Creek—Miss Mary Ellen Bell, public health nurse formerly assigned to the Griffin Creek school, showed slides taken during her tour of Europe at the last meeting of Griffin Creek School club.

A color film of a trip by Glenn Woolridge up the Rogue river from Gold Beach was shown in the gymnasium. It was announced that the recent rummage sale was a "huge success," and the club expressed its appreciation for those who helped with the collection and sale.

Mrs. Chapman and Mrs. Scheel's rooms tied for first place on rummage collection. Refreshments were served by mothers of children in the sixth grade.

EXPENSIVE BATH

Lawrence, Mass.—(U.P.)—Imagine paying $2,165 for a bath! That's what it's going to cost this city to have some memorial chimneys cleaned. An Ohio firm will transport the four large chimneys to Cincinnati, clean and recondition them, and return them to be installed in the municipal water tower.

The automobile industry uses some 300 items purchased abroad ranging from abrasives to tin.
