Major Reshuffle Gives Secret Police Power

Berlin (U.P.)—Communist East Germany announced Saturday a major government reshuffle which gave cabinet status to the dreaded Secret Police and invested it with new power to crush opposition in the Soviet zone.

The drastic move coincided with an invitation to the West German government to begin negotiations on formation of a Kremlin-advocated "all German council" as the first step toward unification of Germany—a move sure to be rejected by Bonn.

The reshuffle raised the secret police office to a ministry and appointed Ernst Wollweber, one of the Kremlin's veteran secret agents, to head the department. Wollweber, 56, has served the Communists since his youth as an agent and skilled saboteur.

A press office announcement called it a "measure to strengthen and improve the work of the state apparatus."
